

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THEOCRITUS.*

WE have little transmitted to us concerning the life of Theocritus ; and this little is involved in contradiction, and obscured by conjecture. Even his age and country have been the subjects of controversy with grammarians and commentators. The relations of Suidas† and Gyraldus, among others, are strangely confused and indeterminate.

* Abridged from Polwhele's Dissertation.

† We are told by Suidas, that Theocritus was a Chian, and a rhetorician ; but that there was another Theocritus, the son of Praxagoras and Philinna, though some say of Simichidas, a Syracusan. Others say " he was born at Cos, but lived at Syracuse." Another Greek account, usually prefixed to our poet's works, asserts that " Theocritus the Bucolic poet was born at Syracuse," and that his " father's name was Simichidas." Gyraldus says, " some have thought him of Cos, some of Chios."

But from his own works we might extract enough to convince us, that he was a Syracusian ; that Praxagoras and Philinna were his parents ; and that he flourished under Hiero and Ptolemy Philadelphus, both in Sicily and in Egypt. Of the former, his twenty-second Epigram is a sufficient testimony* ; and of the latter, his two famous panegyrical Idyls. From the Commentator on Polybius we learn that Hiero, the King of Syracuse, began his reign about 275 years before the Christian æra.†

* This Epigram is inserted in this edition, on the back of the titlepage. The chief object of the poet in writing it, though perhaps it may not appear at first sight, was, no doubt, to take all possible precaution to be distinguished from the rhetorician of the same name. The last verse of the Epigram is an honest declaration, that the poet had not been a plagiarist, like many of his predecessors and contemporaries. In the poem called Ibis, attributed to Ovid, we find this distich : “ Utque Syracosio præstricta fauce poetæ, Sic animæ laqueo sit via clausa tuæ.” Some commentators on this passage suppose Empedocles, who was a poet and philosopher of Sicily, to have been the person pointed at : others think that Ovid, by mistake, might have confounded Theocritus the rhetorician of Chios, who was also a poet, with Theocritus of Syracuse ; for the former, as Plutarch (Sympos. book ii.) and Macrobius (Saturn. vii. 3.) testify, was really executed by Antigonus, for being unseasonably and imprudently witty at that monarch’s expense.

† Though the exploits of Hiero the First are recorded greatly to his advantage by Polybius, in the second book of his History ; though he had many virtues, had frequently signalled his courage and conduct, and distinguished himself by several

As our poet seems to have been dissatisfied with the cold attentions of the Syracusian monarch, who was more distinguished in the character of a warrior than a patron of learning, we may attribute to this circumstance his departure from Sicily into Ægypt: the court of Alexandria was the nurse of the Muses. It is rather remarkable that we know scarcely any thing of Theocritus, but what may be gathered from himself. Independently of this internal evidence, we might determine the place of his birth, from the allusions of his imitator Virgil*, achievements in war, yet he seems, at least in the early part of his reign, not to have expressed any great affection for learning, or learned men. This is supposed to have given occasion to the sixteenth Idyl, inscribed with the name of Hiero; where the poet asserts the dignity of his profession, complains that it met neither with favour nor protection, and in a very artful manner touches upon the virtues of this prince, and insinuates what an illustrious figure he would have made in poetry, had he been as noble a patron as he was a subject for the Muses.

In his voyage to Egypt he touched at Cos, an island in the Archipelago, not far from Rhodes, where he was honourably entertained by Phrasidamus and Antigenes, who invited him into the country to celebrate the festival of Ceres. See Idyl vii.

* Virgil. Ecl. iv. 1.: "Sicelides Musæ, paulo majora canamus." Ecl. vi. 1.: "Prima Syracosio dignata est ludere versu Nostra, neque erubuit sylvas habitare Thalia." Ecl. x. 1.: "Extremum hunc, Arethusa, mihi concede laborem." He is called "a Sicilian poet" by the Emperor Julian; "Siculæ telluris alumnus," by Terentianus Maurus, de Metris, vs. 407.; and is said to be "Sicula tellure creatus," by Manilius, ii. 40.

and the casual intimations of Julian, Terentianus Maurus, and Manilius. But here our views are circumscribed; and we vainly look around us for a detail of his life.*

As a pastoral writer, he found every advantage in the delicious climate and luxuriant landscapes of Sicily. No country could have presented him with a more beautiful assemblage of rural images. The picturesque scenery of the hills and the valleys, diversified beyond description; an almost infinite variety of trees and shrubs; the grottoes, precipices, and fountains, of the most romantic appearance; and the sweetness and serenity of the skies; all these concurred with the tranquillity of retirement in awakening the Muse, and inspiring the Pastoral numbers.

The pieces of Theocritus are the result of his own accurate observation. He described what he saw and felt. His characters, as well as his scenes, are the immediate transcript of nature. We may well imagine, that the shepherds and the herdsmen, surrounded by their flocks and their cattle, piped before him the current songs of the times ; and that he was frequently a witness of their dialogues and contentions ; heard their proverbial speeches, transcribed their manner, and caught from their lips the very vulgarisms which characterise his ruder Idyls. Such was the foundation of his Pastorals, original both in matter and form ; the more rustic of which were probably composed in the earlier part of his life, before he left his native island, allured by brighter prospects.

* Theocritus is said to have been the scholar of Philetas and Asclepiades, or Sicelidas. Philetas was an elegiac poet, of the island of Cos, had the honour to be preceptor to Ptolemy Philadelphus, and is celebrated by Ovid and Propertius. The latter was an imitator of his writings, as we learn from himself, iii. 1. 1.: "Callimachi manes et Coi sacra Philetæ, In vestrum, quæso, me sinite ire nemus." Sicelidas was a Samian, and a writer of Epigrams. Theocritus mentions both of these with honour, Idyl vii. 40.

That he had a very early propensity to this species of composition, and that his genius was originally formed for it, in preference to any other, may be inferred from his frequent recurrence to the woods and plains, in works of a contexture and complexion by no means resembling the Pastoral ; and from the interspersion, indeed, through all his productions, of such similes and allusions as are evidently the offspring of the country. But his genius was not confined to a particular species of writing. Though not fervid or bold, it was versatile and penetrating. The refined age of Theocritus was equally favourable to compositions where the fashions and foibles of men are humorously displayed. Wit can only exist amidst ease and security. At a period of high civilisation, there arise checquered and complex characters, variously shaded by folly, and assuming a diversity of transitory shapes. Hence the manners become the subject of observation, and afford ample scope for the exercise of ridicule. These fleeting traits of a civilised people by no means escaped the penetration of Theocritus.

But he had not only the opportunities of contemplating, in his own country, the beautiful forms of nature, and the diversified appearances of life: he enjoyed the additional advantages of travel. The prospect of Ægyptian manners and customs, and pursuits so different from those of Sicily, must have enlarged his knowledge of mankind; and the rich and extensive pastures on the banks of the Nile have delighted his rural imagination. But, during his residence in Ægypt, his genius and his taste must have been enlightened and refined by the polite conversation of a court, where literature was associated with elegance and splendour; and where emulation was excited and cherished by princely munificence. And not only the Muses flourished under the auspices of a Ptolemy; but literature in general was highly cultivated and improved.*

* We have every reason to imagine that he met with a more favourable reception at Alexandria, than he had experienced at Syracuse, from the encomiums on Ptolemy contained in Idyl xvii., where he rises above the pastoral style, and shows that he could,

The labours of the Seventy Interpreters at the Alexandrian court form a celebrated epoch in the annals of learning. That our poet availed himself of these labours, and frequently snatched a grace from sacred writ, no one will doubt, who peruses his most finished pieces with attention. It was under the patronage of Ptolemy, that his contemporary bard Callimachus composed those Hymns to his fabled Gods, which evidently borrowed some portion of their beauty from the same sources : and possibly the more ancient writers of Greece might have drawn sentiments and imagery from scripture. There is often discoverable in Pindar a spirit of oriental grandeur ; and we trace, in many passages of Homer, resemblances apparently imitative of these divine originals. It is not to be wondered, that such elegant enjoyments should have kindled the gratitude of our poet ; and have produced that panegyric on his royal patron, which, in point of animation, delicacy, address, and well appropriated on an occasion, as Virgil did afterwards, exalt his Sicilian Muse to a sublimer strain. He derives the race of Ptolemy from Hercules ; he enumerates his many cities, describes his great power and immense riches, but above all he commemorates his royal munificence to the sons of the Muses. Towards the conclusion of Idyl xiv. there is a short, but very noble panegyric on Ptolemy. In Idyl xv. he celebrates Berenice, the mother, and Arsinoë, the wife of that prince.

compliment, may be considered as the first of encomiastic performances.

These corresponding felicities of genius and situation was it the fortune of Theocritus to possess. It is to these that we owe his most original and interesting works; though to his perfect acquaintance with fabulous antiquity we are indebted for no mean effusions of the Heroic Muse; while his other productions, of various character, still further evince the versatility of his talents, the extent of knowledge, and the elegance of his friendships.

This great diversity of pieces hath been transmitted to us, except the Epigrams indeed, under the title of Idyls; a term which, according to its general import, is doubtless well applied to a collection of miscellaneous poems.* Heinsius observes, that the ancients gave this title to the poems before us, to express their variety. Thus have we the Sylvæ of Statius, and Edyllia of Ausonius. But as εἰδύλλιον, a diminutive of εἶδος, may signify a little picture, or image, it may, in this sense, be applied, with peculiar propriety, to the Miscellanies of Theocritus; which are, every where, replete with lively and natural representation; and paint all the objects they describe.

* Besides the Idyls and Epigrams now extant, Theocritus is said by Suidas to have written Prætides, Hopes, Hymns, Heroines, Dirges, Elegies, and Iambics.

On a general view of the Greek Idyls, their dialect is an obvious and striking feature. The Doric dialect, in which they are for the most part written, was, of all others, best adapted to the subjects, the characters, and simplicity of the sentiment. It possesses an inimitable charm, that can never be transfused in the most happy translation. It hath a modulated sweetness which melts upon the ear, at the same time that its wildness and rusticity often characterise the personages who use it. In the age of Theocritus, this species of the Doric, much softer and smoother than the old dialect of the Dorians, was current in many parts of Greece ; another adventitious circumstance much in favour of our Poet. Hence his versification derives a melody, which no one of the ancients hath equalled ; while the frequent recurrence of the dactyl gives it an ease and lightness more peculiarly graceful in the pastoral Idyls.

With respect to the general sentiment, there is a clearness, a simplicity, a sportive vivacity, that must always please : but there are few strokes of the sublime ; few fervid aspirations of fancy. There is no want of vigour ; yet there is little enthusiasm. We, in some instances, meet with a surprising thought, with a wonderful degree of animation : but though we are often charmed, we are seldom astonished. There is always a justness in the combination ; all is natural and appropriated ; but there is a regular and equable tenor in the thoughts as well as the language. The passions are tenderly and simply expressed: the complaints of love are drawn from the very bosom of nature; and the situations have peculiar beauty. But the soul of Theocritus was not tuned to sensibility. He had less feeling, though more judgement than Bion. From the turn and manner of his composition we may infer, that he generally trusts to his own stock of ideas, to his own powers of invention.

ΘΥΡΣΙΣ, ἢ ὈΙΔΗ΄. THYRSIS, or THE SONG. In this Idyl the poet relates the unhappy fate of Daphnis, who was considered as a hero among the Sicilian shepherds. The subject is introduced by a dialogue between Thyrsis and a goatherd. — This has ever been esteemed a beautiful poem, from the time of the Roman imitator to the present day. Its characters seem to maintain a superior rank, in point of civility : and a delicacy of sentiment pervades the whole, with scarcely any mixture of vulgarity. The situations of the scene are pleasingly shifted ; and we no sooner commence an acquaintance with Theocritus, than we are presented with a delightful specimen of his talents in painting.

Εἰδύλλιον. This properly signifies a small Picture, or Representation : — a short Poem. It is a diminutive of εἶδος.

1. Ἄδύ τι. This and the following verse have long exercised the ingenuity of the critics, whose various conjectures may be seen in Kiessling's note. Constr. with Valckenaër, Αἰπόλε, ἡδύ τι ἐστὶ τὸ ψιθύρισμα, καὶ ἡ πίτυς ἐκείνη, ἡ μελίσσεται πρὸς ταῖς πηγαῖς, Something sweet, o goatherd, is the whisper, and sweet is the pine, which, &c. Reiske for ἅ, in the second verse, reads ἅ, and makes τὸ ψιθύρισμα the object of μελίσσεται, thus : καὶ ἐκείνη ἡ πίτυς, ᾧ αἰπόλε, ἡ πρὸς ταῖς πηγαῖς οὔσα, μελίσσεται ἡδύ τι τὸ ψιθύρισμα, καὶ σὺ, &c. Both this pine, &c. The former construction is preserved in the ancien. Latin version of Eobanus Hessus : “ Ædepol dulcis hic est vicinus strepitus auræ, Dulcis et hæc strepitu fontes prope consita pinus.” — Theocritus wrote in the Doric dialect, which very frequently puts α for η : thus, ἄ, ἄδὺς, παγά, for ἡ, ἡδὺς, πηγῇ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 10. The Dorians also said τῆνος, τήνα, τῆνο, for ἐκείνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκείνο, (Matth. Gr. Gr. § 150.), and ποτὶ for πρὸς. They substituted σδ for ζ, as in μελίσσεται (Matth. Gr. Gr. § 15.); for the present tense συρίζεις, συρίζει, they said συρίσδες, σύρισδε, or τυρίσδες, τύρισδε, (Matth. Gr. Gr. § 15. § 200. 2.) ; and for the infinitive συρίζειν they wrote συρίσδεν.

Τυρίσδες· μετὰ Πᾶνα τὸ δεύτερον ἄθλον ἀποισῇ.
 Αἶκα τῆνος ἔλη κεραὸν τράγον, αἶγα τὸ λαψῇ.
 Αἶκα δ' αἶγα λάβῃ τῆνος γέρας, ἐς τὲ καταρῥεῖ 5
 Ἄ χίμαρος. χιμάρῳ δὲ καλὸν κρῆς, ἔστε κ' ἀμέλξης.

ΑΓΨΟΛΟΣ.

Ἄδιον, ὦ ποιμᾶν, τὸ τεὸν μέλος, ἧ τὸ καταχῆς
 Τῆν' ἀπὸ τᾶς πέτρας καταλείβεται ὑψόθεν ὕδωρ.
 Αἶκα τὰ Μῶσαι τὰν οἶδα δῶρον ἄγωνται,
 Ἄρνα τὸ σακίταν λαψῇ γέρας· αἱ δέ κ' ἀρέσκη 10
 Τήναις ἄρνα λαβεῖν, τὸ δὲ τὰν αἶν ὕστερον ἀξῇ.

See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 11. For σὺ they said τὸ, whence grammarians derive the Latin tu. Other peculiarities will be noticed en passant.—Τὸ ψιθύρισμα. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 22. “Mænalus argutumque nemus pinosque loquentes Semper habet.” Comp. Ecl. i. 56. v. 82. vii. 1. and Pope, Eloisa to Abeldard, vs. 155.

3. Μετὰ Πᾶνα. Thus also Virgil, Ecl. v. 49. “Tu nunc eris alter ab illo.” Comp. Longus, Past. ii. p. 64. ed. Schæf.

4. Αἶκα. Doric for εἶκε, if perchance. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 14. The Doric κα for κέ, or κέν, i. e. ἄν, is always long. Comp. vs. 6.—Λαψῇ. Doric for ληψῇ. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 242.—5. Ἐς τὲ καταρῥεῖ. Literally, devolves to thee: “ad te defluit.” Thus Horace, Od. i. 28. 28. “Tibi defluat æquo a Jove.” Comp. Callimach. Frægm. 96. Ἐς τὲ is Doric for εἰς σέ. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 145. 4.—6. Κρῆς. Doric for κρέας. Valckenaër and D. Heinsius prefer the latter, in order to preserve the bucolic dactyl in the fourth place.—Ἔστε κ' ἀμέλξης. Until you milk it. Some critics, supposing ἔστε, “donec,” to be derived from ἔως, write ἔστε. The particle κέ, before a vowel κέν, is used for ἄν by the poets. See vs. 4. Ἔστε κ' together require a subjunctive mood. Comp. v. 22. vi. 32.

7. Καταχῆς. Doric for κατηχῆς, loud-sounding, resounding. This has been misunderstood by the old Latin translator, who renders it “effusa aqua,” as if it came from καταχέω. Κατὰ in composition sometimes implies an excess. Reiske constructs this passage thus: τὸ σὸν μέλος καταλείβεται ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος ἡδίων ἢ ἐκεῖνο τὸ κατηχῆς ὕδωρ ἀπὸ τῆς πέτρας καταλείβεται. Jacobs' arrangement is, perhaps, preferable: τὸ σὸν μέλος, ὦ ποιμῆν, ἡδίων ἢ ἐκεῖνο τὸ κατηχῆς ὕδωρ καταλείβεται ἀπὸ τῆς πέτρας, in place of the more usual δ καταλείβεται. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 472. 4. who supplies ἔστιν. This seems to have been copied from Homer, Odyss. B. 17. Comp. Hesiod, Theog. 786. Virgil, Ecl. v. 45. seqq. 83. seqq.—9. Μῶσαι. Doric for Μοῦσαι. The Dorians often put ω for ου. So βωκόλος for βουκόλος, βῶς for βούς, &c. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 14. p. 42.—Οἶδα. This is from οἶς, a poetical form of οἷς. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 73. 2. § 80. 7.—10. Σακίταν. Doric for σηκίτην, stall-fed. Here it signifies well-fed. It is properly an epithet of any young animal, which, for want of its mother's milk, has been brought up in the house.—Αἱ δέ κ' ἀρέσκη. For εἶκε δ' ἀρέσκη. Comp. vs. 4.—11. Ἀξῇ. Thou shalt bear off as thy reward. Δῶρον or γέρας may be supplied.

12. Λῆς. That this is Doric is manifest from Anacreon, x. 6. It is put for λῆς, the second person of the defective verb λᾶω, of the same signification as δέλω. But the verb λᾶω does not exist except in its contracted and Doric forms. — Ποτὶ τᾶν Νυμφᾶν. Doric for πρὸς τῶν Νυμφῶν, by the Nymphs. The Nymphs meant here are the Muses. Comp. v. 140. — Τᾷδε καθίξας. For τῇδε καθίσας, sc. ἐαυτόν. Τῇδε is itself put for ἐν τῇδε χώρα, i. e. ἐνταῦθα. See Bos, Ellips. v. χώρα. — 13. Ὡς. Doric for οὗ, where. See Hermann, Rat. Gr. Gr. p. 114. Where this sloping hillock is. Harles and Kiessling consider ὡς put here for πρὸς. The latter thinks the rule laid down by Porson, Euripides, Phœn. 1415. that ὡς is not used for εἰς and πρὸς, except with reference to persons, does not extend beyond the Attics. See Hermann on Viger, p. 807. Ruhnken, Epist. a Tittmann, p. 186. Poppo, Obs. in Thuc. p. 222. and Ernesti on Xenophon, Mem. ii. 7. 2. — Ἄτε μυρῖκαι. Supply εἰσί: and where are, &c. — 14. Τυρίσδεν. See notes on vss. 1. 3. — Τὰς δ' αἴγας. Virgil, Ecl. v. 12. "Pascentes servabit Tityrus hædos." — Ἐν τῷδε. Supply χρόνῳ: in the mean time. — Νομευσῶ. The Doric future for νομεύσω. The Dorians circumflexed the last syllable of the future. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 212.

15. Ὡ ποιμᾶν. The dramatis personæ of pastorals are bubulci, neatherds; ulpiones, shepherds; and caprarii, goatherds. The rank of these characters was in the order they are here mentioned. The goatherds worshipped Pan, as their preceptor in the art of singing and playing on the pipe. The neatherds and shepherds were disciples of Apollo and the Muses. In Virgil, however, Georg. i. 17. we read "Pan ovium custos," and in Ovid, Fast. ii. 277. "Pan erat armenti custos." — Μεσαμβρινόν. Doric for μεσημβρινόν, and this for κατὰ τὸν μεσημβρινὸν χρόνον, at the noontide hour. Comp. x. 48. — Ἄμμιν. Dat. pl. Æol. for the Doric ἄμιν, and the common ἡμῖν. — 16. Τὸν Πᾶνα δεδοίκαμες. The goatherd being requested to play on the pipe, excuses himself by saying he could not do this at noon, while Pan, whom he revered as his God, was asleep; but Thyrsis might do it with impunity, because he did not live under the same obligation. See Dacier on Horace, Od. iii. 29. 24. "caretque Ripa vagis taciturna ventis." Δεδοίκαμες for δεδοίκαμεν. The Dorians change the termination μεν of the first person plural in all tenses into μες. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 200. 3. — Ἡ γάρ. Here ἥ is equivalent to οὕτως; both particles, therefore, coincide with the Latin "profecto enim." See Hoogeveen, and Viger, vii. § 7. 6. — 17. Τανίκα. Doric for τηνίκα, then. — Κεκμακῶς. Doric for κεκμηκῶς. — Ἀμπαύεται. Doric and poet. for ἀναπαύεται. — Ἐντὶ δὲ πικρὸς. Horace describes Faunus as a choleric God, Od. iii. 18. Ἐντὶ is Doric for ἐστὶ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 217. Comp. xi. 46. It is

19. Τὸ γὰρ δὴ. Comp. vss. 2. 4. 10. Edwards justly remarks here, that δὴ is not a superfluous particle, as Viger imagined: there is no such thing in the Greek language. Particles have been said to be expletives, only because they have not been understood. — 20. Τᾶς βωκολικᾶς. Doric for τῆς βωκολικῆς. — Ἐπὶ τὸ πλεόν. Ad summum; the comparative for the superlative: Τῆου ἡστ arrived at the highest perfection of the bucolic Muse. The Dorians never change the termination ων of the genitive of the third declension into αν. See Bentl. Opusc. Philol. p. 117. ed. Lips. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 74. Comp. v. 148. — Ἄπερ. Where indeed. Com. Hoogeveen, and Viger, vii. § 10. — 23. Αἱ δέ κ' αἰείσης.

Comp. vss. 5. 10. — 24. Ὡς ποκα. Doric for ὥς ποτε. The construction of the following words is, ἦσας ἐρίζων πρὸς Χρόμιν Λιβύηθεν: Thou didst sing contending with Chromis from Libya. Λιβύαθε is Doric for Λιβύηθεν, i. e. ἀπὸ τῆς Λιβύης. The final ν is rejected on account of the metre. — 25. Ἐς τρεῖς ἀμέλξαι. To milk three times, i. e. to be milked as often as three times. For the Doric future δωσῶ, see note on vs. 14. — 26. Ἐχουσα. Doric for ἔχουσα ἐρίφους προσαμέλξεται: Although having two kids it shall be further milked to the quantity of two pails. The Dorians, for ουσα the feminine termination of the participle, used οισα, not only in the present, but also in the 2. aor. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 12. Comp. vi. 30. For the future middle used as a future passive, see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 496. 8. Fischer on Aristophanes, Plut. 114. and Porson on Euripides, Med. 336. "Bis venit ad mulctram, binos alit ubere foetus." Virgil, Ecl. iii. 30.

27. Καὶ βαθὺ κισσύβιον. Supply δώσω. A splendid description of a drinking-cup. Warton observes that this cup was a most capacious vessel, which the Sicilian shepherds used to fill with milk, wine, or other beverage. Theocritus has adorned it, in proportion to its size, with an abundant variety of sculpture. In the formation and selection of the pastoral imagery, with which it is ornamented, the judgment of the poet is no less conspicuous than his invention. Though he has minutely described every figure, he is no where tedious. Virgil has been unfortunate in his imitation of the passage before us. The cup of Theocritus did not belong to Virgil's age or country.—The conjunction καὶ at the commencement of this verse is correlative to τε in vs. 25.—Κισσύσιον was a cup made originally of ivy wood, and afterwards of any other wood, and at first had only one handle. It was peculiar to rustics and shepherds.—Κεκλυσμένον ἄδέϊ καρῷ. Polished with sweet wax. We sometimes use the term washed, when speaking of articles coloured with silver. Theocritus alludes to the art κηρογραφία, which was much in fashion in his time, both among the Egyptians and Sicilians. It was called ἐγκαυστική, from the fire used in annealing the colours. See Robinson's Antiq. Gr. iv. 14. Vitruv. vii. 9. Ἀδέϊ καρῷ is Doric for ἡδέϊ κηρῷ.—28. Νεοτευχῆς. Thucydides, iv. 80. writes νεότευκτον.—Ποτόσδον. Doric for προσόσον.—29. Τῷ. Doric for τοῦ, and this put for οὗ, around whose brim, &c.—Μαρύεται. Doric for μηρύεται, winds itself. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 38. "Lenta quibus torno facili superaddita vitis Diffusos hedera vestit pallente corymbos."—30. Κεκονισμένος. Sprinkled, bestrewn, interspersed. Here we are to understand the ivy as interwoven with the flowers of helichryse, aurelia, or yellow cassidony, supposed to be the "Gnaphalium Stoechas" of Linnæus. Schreber thinks the ἐλίχρυσος to be a pigment of golden colour.—31. Ἐλιξ. The tendril. Creech and Whaley have translated this a kid, led astray, no doubt, by the Latin "capriolus," which signifies a tendril also. Fishlake in his translation of Buttman's Lexilogus renders ἔλιξ εἰλεῖται, "the ivy winds round."

32. Ἐντοσθεν. Within, i. e. under the arbour formed by the ivy.—Γυνά. Doric for γυνή. For the situation of τὶ in this verse, see Hermann, Emend. Rat. Gr. Gr. p. 95. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 487. 6.—33. Ἀμπυκι. The ἄμπυξ was a band, or fillet, for binding the hair on the forehead. The hair braided into a crown, and bound by a fillet, was also called ἄμπυξ. See Spanheim on Callimachus, H. Cer. 125. Παρ is Doric by apocope for παρά. Comp. vii. 112.—34. Καλὸν ἐθειράζοντες. Having beautiful long tresses.—35. Νεικεῖουσι. Νεικέω is a poetical form for νεικέω.—Τὰ δ' οὐ φρενός. But these things affect not her heart.

36. Ἀλλ' ὁκὰ μὲν. But one time, &c. Ὀκὰ is Doric for ὅτε. So in the next verse ἄλλοκα for ἄλλοτε.—Ποτι-

Ἄλλοκα δ' αὖ ποτὶ τὸν ῥίπτεϊ νόον. οἱ δ' ὑπ' ἔρωτος δέρκεται. Doric for προσδέρκεται.— Γελεῦσα. Doric for γελῶσα. The Dorians used in the participle εὔσα in verbs pure for εἶουσα. Comp. vs. 85.

 iii. 18. v. 85. 89. vi. 31. and see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 12. Theocritus, says Warton, seems to have forgotten that he is describing the engraving of a cup. The poet has the realities before his eyes; life and motion, fire and fancy; and his painting corresponds with the warmth of his conceptions.—
 37. Ποτὶ τόν. For πρὸς τοῦτον.—
 38. Κυλοιδιόωντες. For κυλοιδιώντες.
 Κυλοιδιῶν signifies to have the under part of the lower eye-lids swollen. The statues of terrestrial Venus were so represented.

39. Τοῖς δὲ μέτα. Besides these.—
 40. Ἐφ' ἧ σπεύδων. Here the fisherman is described as dragging his huge net on the rock, and earnestly preparing (ἐς βόλον) for a cast.—41. Τὸ fully. Here κατὰ may be supplied; constructs these words thus: ἐλλοπιεύειν κατὰ τόσον σθένος ὅσον γυίων ἐστίν: That he was fishing with all the strength of his limbs. Kiessling says, if anything besides ἐστὶ must be supplied, it should be, τοσοῦτον ὅσον ἐστὶ γυίων σθένος. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 474.

 c. supplies the ellipsis thus: παντὶ τῷ γυίων σθένει ὅσον ἐστὶ.—43. Ὡδε.
 Poet. for οὕτως. So much the sinews are swollen, &c.—ᾠδήκанти. Doric for ᾠδήκασι. Comp. Philostr. Icon.
 i. 13. Ἴνες are properly the tendons of the back part of the neck.—44. Καὶ πολιῷ περ. Tmesis for καίπερ ἐόντι, &c.—Τὸ δὲ σθένος. "In years he seems, tho' not impair'd by years."
 Fawkes. Ἀδας is Doric for ἡβης.

45. Τυτθὸν δ' ὅσον. Only a short way off—not far. See Matth. Gr.
 Gr. § 486. Obs. 1. and Viger, iii. § 9.

 plains it thus: κατὰ τοσοῦτον διάστημα ὅσον ὀλίγον. Comp. Æsop, Fab. 16.
 and Hermann on Viger, p. 726.—
 Ἀπωθεν. A poetical form of ἀποθεν.
 —Ἀλιτρύτοιο. Sea-worm. Thus Gellius, xv. 30. "qui marino vitæ genere detritus jam ac retorridus est."—46.
 Πυρναίαις. Flame-coloured, i. e. mellowed by the heat of the sun; ripe.
 This verse seems to have been copied from Homer, Il. Σ. 561. Ἐν δὲ τίθει σταφυλῇσι μέγα βρίθουσιν ἁλῶήν.— 47. Ἐφ' αἵμασιαῖσι. By a quick-set hedge. Αἵμασια in Herodotus, i. 180.

Ἦμενος· ἀμφὶ δέ μιν δῦ ἁλώπεκες, ἃ μὲν ἀν' ὄρχως is used for a stone wall. It properly signifies a thorn-bush, a briar. Comp. vii. 22.—48. Ἄ μὲν ἀν' ὄρχως. Constr. Ἦ μὲν φοιτᾷ ἀν' ὄρχους σινομένα τὴν σταφυλὴν τρώξιμον: The one is going up and down the rows of vines plundering the ripe grapes. See Bos, Ellips. under the word σταφυλή. Σινομένα is generally understood in the sense of injuring. Comp. Homer, Il. Ω. 45. Hesiod, Ἔργ. 320.—49. Τρώξιμον. Literally, fit to be eaten, eatable, i. e. ripe. It has been observed by many authors that foxes are extremely fond of grapes, and make great havoc in vineyards. See Solomon's Song, ii. 15. Oppian, Cyneg. iii. 458.—50. Τεύχοισα. Doric for τεύχουσα: Contriving every scheme for the scrip, declares she will not leave the lad, until, &c. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 12. Comp. vs. 26. vi. 30. vii. 26.—51. Ἀκράτιστον. This is the reading of almost all the MSS. It is generally interpreted not having breakfasted, fasting. But to express this, ἀνακράτιστον should have been used. Ἀκράτιστος from κρατέω, signifies ὁ μηδενὸς ἐγκρατής, one having nothing in his power, possessed of nothing. The fox is resolved upon emptying the lad's wallet, and so leaving him dinnerless.—Ἐπὶ ξηροῖσι καθίξῃ. Madam Dacier translates this mettre à sec, “to run him aground:” which is a metaphor from ships driven upon shoals, from which they cannot be easily extricated. Comp. Thucydides, i. 109. Some think it a metaphor from unloading a ship, and drawing it up on dry land for the winter. Others interpret ἐπὶ ξηροῖσι, empty, making it synonymous with ἀκράτιστον. Kiessling in place of ἀκράτιστον conjectured ἀνιαρόν (comp. ii. 55. Tibullus, ii. 3. 73.) and ἀχάριστον: the latter of which he explains, “pro quo ille gratiam mihi referet nullam.”

52. Ἀνθερίκεσσι. With stalks of asphodel. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 396. 2.—Ἀκριδοθήκαν. A locust-trap. Longus, Past. i. p. 12. ed. Schæf. Ἦ μὲν ἀνθερίκους ἀνελομένην ἤωθεν ἐξελοῦσα ἀκριδοθήκαν ἐπλεκε. Comp. Virgil, x. 71. Most of the editions have ἀκριδοθήραν, which properly means the hunting of locusts.—54. Φυτῶν. I. e. the vines, which it was his business to protect.—Περὶ πλέγματι. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 589. p. 1038.

55. Ὑγρὸς ἄκανθος. Beck interprets this “mollis acanthus,” as in Virgil, Ecl. iii. 45. “Et molli circum est ansas amplexus acantho.” In Pliny, Epist. v. 6. § 16. we read, “Acanthus in plano mollis, et pæne dixerim, liquidus:” and § 36. “Acanthus hinc inde lubricus et flexuosus.” This kind of acanthus is called μελάμφυλλον. Comp. Diosc. iii. 19. Virgil gives it the epithet “flexus,” Georg. iv. 123. Kiessling would put a full point after ἄκανθος.—56. Αἰολικόν τι θῆμα. Æolis,

Τῷ μὲν ἐγὼ πορθμεῖ Καλυδωνίῳ αἰγά τ' ἔδωκα
 ὦνον, καὶ τυρόεντα μέγαν λευκοῖο γάλακτος·

according to Thucydides, iii. 102. was the ancient name of Calydon. Comp. vs. 27. Most editions have δάημα, which has the first syllable long. Porson proposed to erase τι. Hesychius read δέαιμα. — Τέρας κέ τυ. Here τὸ is Doric for σέ. The Scholiast explains θυμὸν by τὴν σὴν διάνοιαν. Comp. Hermann de Ellipsi et Pleon. p. 667.

57. Τῷ. For τοῦ, i. e. ἔνεκα τούτου, or ἀντὶ τούτου. Comp. Hermann de Ellipsi et Pleon. p. 140. 143. — 58. ὦνον. Comp. Homer, Il. Ψ. 746. — Τυρόεντα. Supply ἄρτον. See Bos, Ellips. and Athenæus, iii. 25. Valcken. says the author does not mean a cheese, but a cake, compounded of cheese and milk. Toup insists on the contrary. Longus, Past. iii. p. 88. ed. Schæf. Καὶ ἔριφον αὐτῇ δώσειν ἐπηγγέλατο, καὶ τυροὺς ἀπαλοὺς πρωτορῥύτου γάλακτος καὶ τὴν αἰγά αὐτήν. Since the first syllable of τυρός is long, Porson proposed τυρῶντα. See Maltby's Lex. Poet. — 59. Οὐδέ τί πα. Virgil, Ecl. iii. "Necdum illis labra admovi sed condita servo." Πα is Doric for πη. Comp. iv. 3. — Ποτὶ . . . θίγεν. Tmesis. Supply δέπας. Προσθίγειν is usually construed with a genitive. — 60. Τύ. For σέ, as above, vs. 56. Ἀρεσαίμαν is Doric for ἀρεσαίμην, from ἀρέσκω. — 61. Αἶκα μοι. Comp. vss. 4. 6. — Ἐφίμερον. Lovely, or amatory. Comp. viii. 82. Heinsius conjectured ἐφ' Ἱμέρα, i. e. a bucolic strain on the unfortunate love of Daphnis, first sung near the river Himera in Sicily.

62. Κοῦ τοι τί. And I envy not thy musical talent. Virgil, Ecl. i. 11. "Non equidem invideo." Others say, I grudge not the gift. — Πόταγε. Doric for πρόσταγε, and this for the simple ἄγε. — 63. Ἐκλελάθοντα. Causing oblivion. Harles and Portus derive this from a new present, ἐκλελάθω. Comp. Il. B. 600. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 442.

64. Ἀρχετε. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 21. "Incipe Mænalios mecum mea tibia versus." — Βωκολικᾶς. Comp. vss. 9. 20.

65. Θύρσις δ' ὦ ἔξ. This is the title of the song, as Heinsius observes, agreeably to the manner of the ancients. He mentions his name, his country, and his poem. See the commencement of Herodotus; and also of Thucydides. ὦξ is for ὁ ἔξ. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 54. § 574. The argument of this song is this, according to Brunck, Analecta V. P. G. tom. iii. p. 67. Daphnis had attached himself to the nymph Eche-nais, and vowed eternal constancy. Another fair damsel also, who was of royal blood, fell desperately in love with him, but strove in vain to gain his affections. She contrived, however, to effect by stratagem that which it was impossible otherwise to accomplish. Daphnis, who to this fraud was an unwilling, and even an unconscious party, never failed in affection to Echenais; but the nymph, having discovered the affair, was filled with fury, and from being a lover became the most implacable enemy.

66. Πᾶ ποκ' ἄρα. Thyrsis commences his song on the death of Daphnis, by a beautiful apostrophe to the nymphs; which is thus imitated by Virgil, Ecl. x. 9. "Quæ nemora, aut qui vos saltus habuere, puellæ Naides, indigno cum Gallus amore periret? Nam neque Parnassi vobis juga, nam neque Pindi Ulla moram fecere, neque Aonie Aganippe." Comp. Milton's Lycidas, vs. 50. Pope, Pastoral ii. 23. and Lord Lyttleton's Monody, vs. 82. Πᾶ ποκα is Doric for ποῦ ποτε, and ὅκα ἐτάκετο for ὅτε ἐτήκετο. Πᾶ should not have an iota subscript. Comp. ii. 1. — 67. *Η κατὰ Πηνειῷ. Was it either in the beautiful valleys of Peneus, or in the valleys of Pindus. — 70. *Αρχετε βωκολικᾶς. Verbs signifying to begin govern a genitive. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 335.

71. Τῆνον μὰν θῶες. Virgil, Ecl. v.

27. "Daphni, tuum Pœnos etiam ingemuisse leones Interitum, montesque feri sylvæque loquuntur." Comp. x. 13. Μὰν is Doric for μὴν, "profecto," "atqui." See Hoogeveen, and Buttmann, Gr. Gr. § 149. The use of ὠδύραντο is to be attributed to the Doric dialect; for wolves are said properly to howl, ὀλοῦναι. Comp. ii. 35. — 72. Χῶκ. For καὶ ὁ ἐκ.

74. Πολλαί. Virgil, Ecl. x. 16. "Stant et oves circum." "Warton thinks the description of the Sicilian bard has gained strength and pathos, in proportion to the multitude and variety of animals employed as mourners at the death of Daphnis. Yet his brother has discovered more genuine pathos in that single "stare circum" of Virgil, than in the aggregate of beasts collected from the meadows of Sicily and the forests of Africa." Polwhele. — Δαμάλαι. This is a poetical word.

77. *Ηνθ' Ἑρμᾶς. Doric for ἦλθ' Ἑρμῆς. So ἦνθες, xi. 26. for ἦλθες; ἦνθομες, ii. 143. for ἦλθομεν; ἦνθον, ii. 118. for ἦλθον, &c. Πρᾶτιστος is Doric for πρῶτιστος. Virgil, Ecl. x. 26. "Pan Deus Arcadiæ venit." *ὄρεος for οὄρεος. Comp. vs. 115. —

Echenais. She is mentioned by Parthenius, c. 29. Comp. vs. 65.

85. Ζατεῦσα. Doric for ζητοῦσα. Comp. vs. 36. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 12. Priapus is supposed to feign this, for the purpose of consoling Daphnis. For ζατεῦσ' Hemsterhuis conjectured ζαλοῖσ', inflamed with jealousy, on account of a rival: Bindemann φεύγοις'. The story of Daphnis is differently told in various authors. All that can be learned from Theocritus is this: Daphnis had made a vow never to yield to the influence of love. Venus enraged at this inspires him with a passion for a certain nymph, which drove him to an untimely end.

92. Τῶς δ' οὐδέν. Doric for τοὺς δ' (i. e. τοὺτους δ') οὐδὲν προσελέξατο. — Ἀλλὰ τὸν αὐτῷ. But he was conquering, i. e. endeavouring to conquer, his bitter passion. Harles interprets ἄνυε by "tolerabat."

Gr. § 149. * Ἠδεῖα is a neuter adjective put for ἡδέως, and must be joined with ἦλθε. See Hermann on Sophocles, Œd. Tyr. 82. — 96. Λάθρια μὲν γελάοισα. Secretly, slyly. Horace, Od. iii. 27. 66. "Aderat querenti Perfidum ridens Venus." — Βαρὺν. Having heavy anger in her mind, i. e. greatly enraged. Virgil, Æn. i. 209. "premit altum corde dolorem."

Οὗ λέγεται τὰν Κύπριν ὁ βωκόλος, — ἔρπε ποτ' Ἴδαν, Ἐρπε ποτ' Ἀγχίσαν· τῆνεί δρύες, ὦδε κύπειρος. 106

97. Τὸ θὴν. You certainly boasted, &c. λυγίξειν is the Doric future for λυγίσειν. It is a metaphor from the palæstra. — 98. Ἄρ' οὐκ αὐτὸς. Are you not yourself, &c. Ἄρα with a circumflex is an interrogative particle. Comp. ii. 158. vii. 149. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 614. Hoogeveen and Viger, viii. § 4. 4. — Ἀργαλέω. Doric genitive for ἀργαλέον.

100. Τὰν δ' ἄρα. The primary signification of ἄρα, and ἄρ poetically, is therefore. Whence various other meanings are deduced: then, consequently, thus, afterwards, perhaps, &c. See Hoogeveen, and Viger, viii. § 4. 1. seqq. Χῶ is put for καὶ δ. Comp. vs. 138. — 102. Ἦδη γάρ. For all things now declare that my sun is set, i. e. that I shall no more behold the light of the sun. Φάος ἡελίοιο is often put for life in Homer. For various readings and contortions of this sentence, see Kiessling's edition. — Δεδύκειν. A new present from the perf. of δύνω. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 230. — 103. Δάφνις κῆν αἶδα. Daphnis even in Hades shall be an example of unhappy love. So Kiessling. Harles and others say: Daphnis even in Hades shall be the bitter torment of Cupid, when he shall witness there my unextinguished passion for Echenais, whom I never really ceased to love. But there seems to be some error in the line. Hemsterhuis for ἔσσεται conjectured εἴσεται, “sciet,” “sentiet,” comparing Apoll. Rhod. ii. 153. and Bindemann Δάφνιδι for Δάφνις. Κῆν is Doric for καὶ ἐν. Polwhele omits this verse in his translation. Fawkes' version of the passage runs thus: “Ah, cruel Venus! Daphnis thus began, Abhorr'd and curs'd by all the race of man, My day's decline, my setting sun I know, I pass a victim to the shades below, Where riots love with insolent disdain.”

105. Οὗ λέγεται . . . ὁ βωκόλος. Aposiopesis. Comp. Lucian's fifteenth Dialogue of the Gods, Virgil, Ecl. iii. 8. and see Bos, Ellips. p. 588. ed. Schæf. The circumstance alluded to is narrated by Homer, Il. B. 819. Hymn to Venus, 156. Hesiod, Theog. 1008. Add. Theocritus, xx. 34. — Ἐρπε. Hasten. The Dorians often use ἔρπειν in this sense. Comp. vii. 2. See D'Orville on Charit. p. 306. and the commentators on Sophocles, Œd. Tyr. 83. — 106. Τῆνεί. Doric for ἐκεῖ, i. e. in Ida. Comp. ii. 98. — ὦδε. A poetical word for ἐνταῦθα, here. — Κύπειρος. Comp. Il. Φ. 351. This plant, which is a kind of rush, is the “Cyperus cumosus” of Sibthorp, Flor. Græc. i. tab. 4. Polwhele says it is, most probably, the three-cornered rush described by Pliny, N. H. xxi. 18. white at bottom and black at top. It occurs several times in Theocritus. Some have imagined it to be a tree; perhaps from its association with oaks, as in this place, and in the fifth Idyl. But Virgil, in imitation of this passage, associates the oak and the reed, Ecl. vii. 12. "Hic virides tenera prætexit arundine ripas Mincius, eque sacra resonant examina quercu." Reiske, referring to Idyl v. 33. says ὧδε in this and the following verse means "ibi," in Ida. — 107. Ὡδε καλόν. Kiessling thinks this verse does not belong to the present passage, but has been transferred hither from Idyl v. 46. — Βομβεῦντι. Doric for βομβοῦσι πρὸς σμήνεσι. We cannot repeat this verse, says Polwhele, without fancying we hear the buzzing of bees.

109. Ὡραῖος. In the bloom of youth. Comp. vs. 150. Virgil renders it "formosus," Ecl. x. 14. "Et formosus oves ad flumina pavit Adonis." The "ad flumina" here has induced Eichstadius to propose ἐπ' ἀκτῇ in place of ἐπεὶ καί. Jacobs conjectured ἐπάκτια and ἐπ' ὄχθαις. For ὦραῖος Toup proposed δρειος, which Brunck introduced into the text. — Ὡδωνις. For ὁ Ἀδωνις. Comp. iii. 47. — 110. Καὶ πτῶκας. Virgil, Georg. i. 308. "Auritosque sequi lepores tum figere damas."

Comp. Ecl. ii. 29. For πάντα, which Harles translates, allerley, "all sorts," Brunck reads τᾶλλα.

112. Αὖτις ὅπως. Supply δρα. See Viger, vii. § 10. 6. Bos, Ellips. p. 643. ed. Schæf. For the construction of ὅπως see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 519. 7. Dawes, Misc. Crit. p. 227. and Griffiths on Æschyl. Prom. v. 68. — Στασῇ. Doric future. — Ἰοῖσα. Doric for ἰοῦσα. This verb joined with another implies haste. Hence Reiske translates: "I propere et vide, ut cum Diomede iterum congrediariis." Comp. ii. 7. The passage in Homer, Il. E. 336. seqq. is alluded to, where Venus is wounded by Diomede. The phrase στησῇ ἄσσον ἰοῦσα is Homeric. Comp. Δ. 496. E. 611. H. 225. &c. — 113. Δάφνιν. The former syllable, in consequence of the mute and liquid, is made short here and in vs. 116. The same syllable is common, on the same principle, in ἀκμή, λάχνη, πότμος, ῥυθμός, σταθμός, τέκνον, τέχνη, and the middle syllable in ἀριθμός and ἐρετός. — Ἀλλά. Come on then; or well then; or wherefore. Comp. Lucian, D. Mar. 11. D. Mort. 17. — Μάχευ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 205. 2.

115. Ὡρεα. Doric for the Ionic ὄρεα, and this for δρεα. Comp. vs. 77. — 116. Χαίρετε. "Vivite sylvæ," Καὶ ποταμοὶ, τοὶ χεῖτε καλὸν κατὰ Θύμβριδος ὕδωρ.

*Αρχετε βωκολικᾶς, Μῶσαι φίλαι, ἄρχετ' αἰοιδᾶς.

Virgil, Ecl. viii. 58. — 118. Τοὶ χεῖτε. Which pour fair streams down Thymbris. Thymbris is the name of a mountain in Sicily, which Toup clearly proves from an epigram of Demostratus, Anthol. Cephal. p. 172. Casaubon and Valckenaër were of the same opinion. The ancient commentators supposed it to be the name of a river. Τοὶ is Ionic and Doric for the relative οἱ.

120. Δάφνις ἐγὼν. Kiessling and Jacobs join this with vs. 116. Stroth and Vossius consider it an inscription, as in Virgil, Ecl. v. 43. "Daphnis ego in sylvis, hinc usque ad sidera notus, Formosi pecoris custos, formosior ipse." "Here Virgil exceeds Theocritus, who only mentions the rural employments of Daphnis, whereas Virgil represents his Daphnis as a person whose fame had reached up to heaven." Martyn. — *Ὡδε. 128. *Ενθ', ὦ *ναξ. Daphnis, now about to die, presents his shepherd-pipe to his tutelary deity, Pan. — Τάνδε φέρε. Virgil, Ecl. vi. 69. "Hoc tibi dant calamos, en, accipe, Musæ, Ascræo quos ante seni." Comp. Moschus, iii. 54. — Εὐπάκτοιο ἐκ καρῶ. Virgil, Ecl. ii. 32. "Pan primus calamos cera conjungere plures Instituit." "The shepherd's pipe was composed of seven reeds unequal in length, and of different tones, joined together with wax. In Idyl viii. there are two pipes described, composed of nine reeds each, but seven was the usual number." Fawkes. Comp. viii. 19. and Longus, Past. ii. p. 65. ed. Schæf. — Μελίπνουν. "Sweet-ton'd and bent your rosy lip to suit." Fawkes. Kiessling interprets μελίπνουν, "quæ suavem edit odorem."

Can it be supposed that Virgil either did not understand this verse of Theocritus, or, possessing an incorrect copy of our poet, pronounced the adjective ἐναλλα, enhāla? or how can we account for "Omnia vel medium fiant mare," vs. 58. in his imitation of this passage? For the use of the plural γένοιντο, see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 300. — Ἐνείκαι. The first aor. opt. of the obsolete verb ἐνείκω, the same as φέρω. Comp. v. 125. Matth. Gr. That species is meant which Linnæus calls "Strix Scops." Comp. vs. 80. Γαρύσαιντο is Doric for γηρύσαιντο from γηρύειν, to sing. With a dative it signifies to sing in competition with. Comp. v. 36. The proper meaning of this verb is "garrio." In Pindar, Ol. ii. 156. as well as here, it is applied to birds. In Idyl viii. 77. ix. 7. it is used to express the cry of calves. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 55. ΦΑΡΜΑΚΕΥΤΡΙΑ. THE ENCHANTRESS. In this Idyl Simætha bitterly complains of Delphis, who had gained her affections, and afterwards forsaken her. She employs various incantations in order to bring him back; and betrays all the variety of passions that are incident to a neglected lover. This has been closely imitated by Virgil, who has transfused its principal beauties into his eighth Eclogue.

1. Πᾶ μοι ταὶ δάφναι. Comp. i. 66. xv. 33. The particle πᾶ is properly written without the ι subscript. See Buttmann, Gr. Gr. § 116. Obs. 8. "This poem seems to breathe a spirit above the pastoral strain: and Simætha rather resembles the Medea, or Hecate, whom she invokes, than a character on a level with the rustics of Theocritus. However this may be, a wonderful animation runs through the whole; which was doubtless pronounced with the most violent emotions of passion, and the strongest energy of correspondent action." Pol-whele. — Φέρε, Θέστυλι. Simætha summons her servant Thestylis to assist in preparing the magic rites: she explains the cause of the ceremony, and invokes the aid of Luna and Hecate. Thus Virgil, Ecl. viii. 64. "Effer aquam, et molli cinge hæc altaria vitta: Verbenasque adole pingues, et mascula thura, Conjugis ut magicis sanos avertere sacris Experiar sensus." — Φίλτρα. Love potions; also charms to inspire love.—2. Κελέβαν. Properly a drinking-cup. In Nicander, Ther. 913. it signifies a mortar; and Casaubon thinks it may be taken in the same sense here. Fawkes and Pol-whele make it a cauldron. Virgil takes no notice of it.—Οἶδς ἁώτῳ. "Ovis flore," a periphrasis for fine wool. Comp. Homer, Il. I. 657. N. 559. Odyss. A. 443. Pindar, Ol. ii. 14. Pyth. iv. 335. In the same way are ἄνθος, and the Latin "flos" used to signify that which is most excellent of its kind.—3. Ὡς καταθύσομαι. Virgil translates this, "ut sanos avertere sacris Experiar sensus," in the lines quoted above. For the construction of ὥς with the future, see Viger, p. 588. and Hermann, p. 850. The Scholiast, however, does not consider this as a future, but as put for καταθύσωμαι, 1 aor. subj. mid. with which he compares ἵνα εἶδομεν ἄμφω, Homer, Il. A. 363. Καταθύεσθαι signifies to force by the effect of magical incantation, to charm. Εὖντα is Doric for ἐόντα.—4. Δωδεκαταῖος. Elegantly for δώδεκα

17. *Ιϋγξ. Properly a bird called the wryneck, remarkable for a long neck, and the singular contortions of its head. It was sacred to Venus, and much used in love incantations, especially to recall the alienated affections of a beloved object. It was employed fastened to a wheel, by turning which the effect was supposed to be produced. It also means the magical wheel itself. Comp. Xenophon, Mem. iii. 11. 17. and Schneider's note. Harles interprets it Zauberkreisel, "a magical top." It may be translated "carmina," charms, with Virgil, Ecl. viii. 68. "Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnim."—Ἐλκε τὸ. Comp. i. 2. 4. 10.

18. Πρᾶτον. Doric for πρῶτον.—Τάκεται. Comp. i. 66. 82.—Ἀλλά. Comp. vs. 10.—19. Πᾶ τὰς φρένας. Literally: Whither hast thou fled as to thy mind? i. e. whither have thy senses flown? Πᾶ. Doric for πῆ, and this for ποῖ. Comp. vii. 21. xi. 72.—20. *Ἡ ῥά γέ τοι. Have I then indeed become detestable and an object of derision to thee?—Καὶ τίν. Comp. vs. 11.—21. Πάσσ' ἅμα. Heinsius conjectured πᾶσσ' ἅλα, "sparge salem." This verse is parodied by Virgil, Ecl. viii. 78.

"Necte, Amarylli, modo; et Veneris, dic, vincula necto."

23. Δέλφισ ἔμ' ἀνίασεν. Virgil, ibid. vs. 82. "Sparge molam, et fragiles incende bitumine lauros: Daphnis me malus urit, ego hanc in Daphnide laurum." The laurel was burned in order to consume the flesh of the person against whom the magical rites were performed. Gay has imitated this passage in his fourth Pastoral: "Two hazel-nuts I threw into the flame, And to each nut I gave a sweetheart's name: This with the loudest bounce me sore amaz'd, That in a flame of brightest colour blaz'd: As blaz'd the nut, so may thy passion grow; For 't was thy nut that did so brightly glow."—Ἐπὶ Δέλφιδι. Upon a waxen image of Delphis, which the sorceress put into the fire. Some translate it in the person of Daphnis, as in the passage of Virgil just quoted.—24. Χῶς αὐτὰ. Doric for καὶ ὡς αὐτὴ ληκεῖ. Join μέγα with λακεῖ. Καππυρίσασα is Doric for καταπυρίσασα.—25. Κήξαπίνας. For καὶ ἐξαπίνης ἡφθη, καὶ οὐδὲ, &c.—26. Ἀμαθύνοι. This verb properly signifies to reduce to sand, or dust. Comp. Homer, Il. i. 593. Hence to consume.

Ὡς τοῦτον τὸν καρὸν ἐγὼ σὺν δαίμονι τάκω,
 Ὡς τάκοιθ' ὑπ' ἔρωτος ὁ Μύνδιος αὐτίκα Δέλφισ·
 Χῶς δινεῖθ' ὅδε ῥόμβος ὁ χάλκεος, ἐξ Ἀφροδίτας 30
 Ὡς κεῖνος δινοῖτο ποθ' ἀμετέρησι θύρῃσιν.

Ἰϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τήνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.
 Νῦν θυσῶ τὰ πίτυρα. τὸ δ', Ἄρτεμι, καὶ τὸν ἐν αἶδα Κινήσαις ῥ' ἀδάμαντα, καὶ εἴτι περ ἀσφαλὲς ἄλλο.
 Θέστυλι, ταὶ κύνες ἄμμιν ἀνὰ πτόλιν ὠρύονται. 35
 Ἀ θεὸς ἐν τριόδοισι· τὸ χαλκίον ὡς τάχος ἄχει.

Ἰϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τήνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.
 Ἥνιδε σιγαῖ μὲν πόντος, σιγῶντι δ' ἀῆται·
 Ἀ δ' ἐμὰ οὐ σιγαῖ στέρνων ἐντοσθεν ἀνία,
 Ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τήνῳ πᾶσα καταίθομαι, ὅς με τάλαιναν 40

28. Ὡς τοῦτον. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 80. "Limus ut hic durescit, et hæc ut cera liquescit Uno eodemque igni; sic nostro Daphnis amore." — Σὺν δαίμονι. With the assistance of the deity. Comp. vii. 12. Aristoph. Plut. 114. Xenophon, Cyrop. iii. 1. 15. Matth. Gr. Gr. §577. — 30. Χῶς δινεῖται. And as this brazen wheel is wheeled round. The Canidia of Horace makes use of this wheel, Epod. xvii. 7. — Ἐξ Ἀφροδίτας. Comp. vii. 55. — 31. Ποθ' ἀμετέρησι. Doric for πρὸς ἡμετέρας θύρας.

33. Πίτυρα. Comp. Demosthenes περὶ Στεφ. c. 79. — Τὸ δ', Ἄρτεμι. And thou, O Moon, shalt move the invincible Pluto in Hades, and whatsoever else is unshaken. Comp. i. 2. 4. 10. Warton reads Κινήσαις Ῥαδάμανθα. Comp. Ovid, Met. iv. 452. Propert. iv. 11. 1. Hermann says the subject matter itself, and also the unmeaning ῥ' prove that the name of Rhadamanthus is concealed under the present reading. He proposes therefore: Κινήσαις Ῥαδάμανθον, ἢ εἴ τι, &c. — 35. Ἄμμιν. Comp. i. 15. — ὠρύονται. Virgil, Æn. vi. 257. "Visæque canes ululare per umbram Adventante Dea." Dogs are said properly to bark, ὑλάκτειν. Comp. i. 71.

36. Ἀ θεός. Diana Trivia, Hecate. "The reason why Hecate was placed in the public ways, was because she presided over piacular pollutions. Every new moon there was a public supper provided at the charge of the richer sort, in a place where three ways met: hence she was called Trivia. This was no sooner brought, than the poor people carried it all off, giving out that Hecate had devoured it. These suppers were expiatory offerings to move this Goddess to avert any evils, which might impend by reason of piacular crimes committed in the highways." Fawkes. Comp. Ovid, Trist. iv. 4. 73. — Τὸ χαλκίον. Quick sound the cymbals. Virgil, Georg. iv. 64. "Tinnitusque cie, et matris quate cymbala circum." "Among the Swedish Laplanders, there is, in every family, a drum for consulting the devil." Polvhele.

38. Ἥνιδε σιγαῖ. Comp. i. 149. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 57. "Et nunc omne tibi stratum silet æquor; et omnes, Aspice, ventosi ceciderunt murmuris auræ."

Ἀντὶ γυναικὸς ἔθηκε κακὰν καὶ ἀπάρθενον ἦμεν.

*Ιϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τῆνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.

Ἐς τρεῖς ἀποσπένδω, καὶ τρεῖς τάδε, πότνια, φωνῶ·

Τόσπον ἔχοι λάθας, ὅσπον ποκὰ Θασέα φαντὶ 45

Ἐν Δία λασθῆμεν εὐπλοκάμῳ Ἀριάδνας.

*Ιϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τῆνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.

Ἴππομανὲς φυτόν ἐστι παρ' Ἀρκάσι· τῷ δ' ἔπι πᾶσαι

Καὶ πῶλοι μαίνονται ἀν' ὥρεα καὶ θοαὶ ἵπποι.

Ὡς καὶ Δέλφιν ἴδοιμι, καὶ ἐς τόδε δῶμα περᾶσαι 50

Μαινομένῳ ἵκελον, λιπαρᾶς ἔκτοσθε παλαίστρας.

*Ιϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τῆνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.

Τοῦτ' ἀπὸ τᾶς χλαίνας τὸ κράσπεδον ὤλεσε Δέλφισ,

Ὡ γὰρ νῦν τίλλοισα κατ' ἀγρίῳ ἐν πυρὶ βάλλω.

Αἱ αἱ, ἔρως ἀνιარέ, τί μευ μέλαν ἐκ χροὸς αἶμα 55

Ἐμφύς ὡς λιμναῖτις ἅπαν ἐκ βδέλλα πέπωκας;

*Ιϋγξ, ἔλκε τὸ τῆνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.

Comp. Apollonius Rhod. iii. 743. seqq. Virgil, Æn. iv. 522. seqq. — 41. ἦμεν. The same as ἦμες, both of which are Doric for εἶναι. Comp. vs. 116.

43. Ἐς τρεῖς. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 73. "Terna tibi hæc primum triplici diversa colore Licia circumdo, terque hæc altaria circum Effigiem duco: numero Deus impare gaudet." The number three was held sacred by the ancients. Comp. Ovid, Fast. ii. 638. Tibullus, i. 2. 42. seqq.

45. Λάθας. Doric for λήθης, ὅσπον ποτὲ Θησέα φασί. — 46. Δία. Afterwards called Naxus. Comp. Apoll. Rhod. iv. 434. — Λασθῆμεν. Doric for λησθῆναι εὐπλοκάμου Ἀριάδνης. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 242.

48. Ἴππομανές. An Arcadian plant, having the fruit of the wild cucumber, and the leaves of the prickly poppy. Some suppose it to be an animal substance. See a dissertation on Hippomanes at the end of Bayle's Dictionary.

Consult Harduin on Pliny, N. H. viii. 42. Broukhuis on Tibullus, ii. 4. 58. and the interpreters on Virgil, Georg. iii. 280. Æn. iv. 515. — Τῷ δ' ἔπι. Anastrophe: All run mad after it. — 49. Ἀν' ὥρεα. Comp. i. 77. 115. — 50. Καὶ Δέλφιν. Kiessling explains this by "etiam Delphin," and the second conjunction by "et quidem." Reiske would read περῶντα for περᾶται.

53. Ὦλεσε. Rent. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 91. "Has olim exuvias mihi perfidus ille reliquit, Pignora cara sui, quæ nunc ego limine in ipso, Terra, tibi mando." — 54. Ὡ γὰρ. Doric for ὃ ἐγώ. Join κατὰ with βάλλω. Comp. Homer, Il. M. 206.

55. Τί μευ μέλαν. Constr. Διὰ τί ἐμφύς μοι ὡς λιμναῖτις βδέλλα ἐκπέπωκας ἐκ χροὸς μευ μέλαν αἶμα. Comp. Sophocles, Electr. 777. ed. Erf. Horace, A. Poët. 476. and Lambinus thereon.

Σαύραν τοι τρίψασα ποτὸν κακὸν αὔριον οἰσῶ.
 Θέστυλι, νῦν δὲ λαβοῖσα τὸ τὰ θρόνα ταῦθ' ὑπόμαξον
 Τᾷς τήνω φλιᾷς καθυπέρτερον, ᾧς ἔτι καὶ νῦν 60
 Ἐκ θυμῷ δέδεμαι· ὁ δέ μευ λόγον οὐδένα ποιεῖ·
 Καὶ λέγ' ἐπιφθύσδοισα· Τὰ Δέλφιδος ὅστέα μάσσω.
 Ἴϋξ, ἔλκε τὸ τήνον ἐμὸν ποτὶ δῶμα τὸν ἄνδρα.
 Νῦν δὴ μούνη ἐοῖσα πόθεν τὸν ἔρωτα δακρυσῶ ;
 Ἐκ τίνος ἀρξεῦμαι ; τίς μοι κακὸν ἄγαγε τοῦτο ; 65
 Ἦνθ' ἂ τῷ ὑβούλοιῳ καναφόρος ἄμμιν Ἀναξῶ
 Ἄλσος ἐς Ἀρτέμιδος· τᾷ δὴ τόκα πολλὰ μὲν ἄλλα
 Θηρία πομπεύεσκε περισταδὸν, ἐν δὲ λέαινα.
 Φράζεό μευ τὸν ἔρωθ' ὅθεν ἵκετο, πότνα Σελάνα.

58. Σαύραν. Σαῦρος is used Idyl. vii. 22. — 59. Τὰ θρόνα ταῦτα. Those magical poisons, i. e. the pounded lizard. The term θρόνα was applied by the Ætolians to drugs, by the Thessalians to spotted reptiles, and by the Cyprians to flowered dresses. In Homer, Il. X. 440. it signifies roses. Nicander, Ther. 413. and Lycophron, 674. use it in the same sense as Theocritus, φάρμακα μαγικά. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 95. "Has herbas atque hæc Ponto mihi lecta venena." Comp. Horace, Epod. v. 77. — 60. Τᾷς τήνω. Doric for τῆς ἐκείνου. — Ἄς ἔτι. I. e. ἀφ' ἧς ἔτι καὶ νῦν ἐκδέδεμαι θυμῷ. Some read ἐκ θυμῷ, i. e. ἐκ θυμοῦ, the same as ἀπὸ καρδίας, ἐκ ψυχῆς. — 61. Ὁ δέ μευ. And he makes no estimation of me. — 62. Ἐπιφθύσδοισα. Doric for ἐπιφθύζουσα, spitting on the threshold. Comp. vii. 127. Some interpret it whispering, or muttering.

64. Νῦν δὴ μούνη. Thestyli having now departed, the sorceress commences a mournful soliloquy on the origin and progress of her ill-fated passion. — 65. Ἀρξεῦμαι. Doric for ἀρξομαι. Comp. vii. 95. So βασεῦμαι, vs. 8. κεισεῦμαι, iii. 53. See Gregorius Cor. p. 261. and Maittaire de Dial. p. 301.

66. Ἦνθ' ἂ τῷ. I. e. Ἀναξῶ κανηφόρος ἢ θυγάτηρ τοῦ Εὐβούλου ἦλθε ἡμῖν ἐς ἄλσος Ἀρτέμιδος. "The Athenian virgins were presented to Diana before it was lawful for them to marry, on which occasion they offered presents in baskets to that Goddess, to gain leave to depart out of her train, and change their state of life." Potter. — 67. Τᾷ δὴ τόκα. Then in honor of her (Diana) many other wild beasts, i. e. besides the lioness. Comp. i. 24. 66. — 68. Πομπεύεσκε περισταδόν. Were led round about in procession. Πομπεύεσκε. Doric and poet. for ἐπόμπευε.

69. Φράζεό μευ. Attend to my love, whence it came, &c. Thus Palmerius Exercit. p. 794. Comp. vs. 84. vi. 13. D'Orville, Vann. Crit. p. 147. and on Charit. p. 669. ed. Lips. Warton prefers the old version, "Dic amorem meum," &c. The subject of a dependent clause is often put in the preceding clause, in the case which the verb there requires. Thus sometimes also in Latin; as in Terence, Hec. iii. 5. 18. "Omnem rem scio, ut sit acta." Ibid. iv. 1. 60. "Simul vereor Pamphilum, ne orata nostra nequeant diutius Celare." Comp. Anacreon, x. 6

70. Ἄ μακαρίτις. Ὁ μακαρίτης, and ἡ μακαρίτις, were expressions frequently used when speaking of deceased persons, similar to ours, of blessed memory. Comp. Æschylus, Pers. 625. Alciphron. iii. 37. and D'Orville, l. c.

72. Θάσασθαι. Comp. i. 149. — Μεγάλοιτος. A poetical word peculiar to Theocritus. — 73. Σύροισα. Training after me a beautiful gown of fine linen, i. e. clad in a beautiful gown with a long train. — 74. Κάμφιστειλαμένα. For κατ' ἀμφιστειλαμένη: And bedecked with the mantle of Clearista. A satirical lash at the vanity of such women as went to the show in borrowed clothes. Juvenal, vi. 274. "Ut spectet ludos, conducit Ogulnia vestem." Comp. Iamblichus, Pythag. § 55.

76. Μέσαν κατ' ἀμαξιτὸν. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 59. "Hinc adeo media est nobis via: namque sepulcrum Incipit apparere Bianoris." — Τὰ Λύκωνος. Supply δώματα, or οἰκήματα.

78. Ἐλιχρύσοιο. Comp. i. 30. — 80. Ὡς ἀπό. Tmesis. Constr. ὡς ἄρτι ἀπολιπόντων καλὸν πόνον γυμνασίου: As they had just left the graceful toil of the gymnasium. For the construction of the particle ὥς with the genitive absolute, see Viger, viii. § 10. 3. Zeune thereon, p. 559. and Matth. Gr. Gr. § 568. — Ἄρτι. Comp. ii. 104. xi. 9. and see Viger, vii. § 4. 1.

82. Χῶς ἴδον. I. e. καὶ ὥς, &c. Comp. iii. 42. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 41. "Ut vidi, ut perii, ut me malus absulit error!" The second ὥς in this verse is used to express celerity, like the Latin "quam," or εὐθὺς in Achilles Tatius, p. 18. ed. Salmas. Ὡς δὲ εἶδον, εὐθὺς ἀπολώλεν. So in Homer, Il. ζ. 294. Ὡς δ' ἴδεν, ὥς μιν ἔρως πυκινὰς φρένας ἀμφεκάλυψεν. Il. T. 16. Ὡς εἶδ', ὥς μιν μᾶλλον ἔδυ χόλος, ἐν δέ οἱ ὄσσε, κ. τ. λ. Comp. Valck. Callim. Fragm. p. 105. Hermann de Emend. R. G. G. p. 114. Hoogeveen, i. 30. Viger, viii. § 10. 4. — Περιῖαφθη. Tmesis: Was affected. Scheller reads περί in the sense of "penitus." Græfe conjectured πυρί. — 84. Ἐφρασάμαν. I observed, attended to. Comp. vs. 69. —

*Εγνων· ἀλλά μέ τις καπυρὰ νόσος ἐξαλάπαξε· 85

 Τήρησον ποτὶ τὰν Τιμαγήτοιο παλαίστραν·
 Τηνεὶ γὰρ φοιτῇ, τηνεὶ δέ οἱ ἀδὺ καθῆσθαι.

*Ἀπῆνθον. Comp. i. 77.—85. Καπυρά. Ardent. Comp. vi. 16. vii. 37. The ancient grammarians derive καπυρὸς from καίειν and πυροῦν; Schneider from καπύειν. See Boden on Longus, p. 148. — 86. ἅματα. Doric for ἡματα.

88. Ὅμοιος θάψω. Ovid, Met. iv. 134. "Oraque buxo Pallidiora geres." Thapsus was a Scythian wood of the colour of box. Some suppose it to be the Indian guaiacum. Heinsius says that women, who chose to look pale, tinged their cheeks with it. Comp. Nicander Ther. 529. and Wolf on the Fragm. of Sappho, p. 249. Θάψω is Doric for θάψου. Some write θάψω. — 89. *Εἴρευν. Doric and Ion. for ἔρρουν. — Αὐτὰ δὲ λοιπὰ. Constr. αὐτὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ἔτι ἦν ὅστ' ἐκαὶ δέρμα: And the only things still left of me, were skin and bones. Comp. iv. 15. *Ἡς is Doric for ἦν, "erat," or "erant." — 90. Καὶ ἐς τίνος. Supply δόμον: And to the house of what sorceress did I not resort for a remedy; or the house of what hag did I leave untried? Λείπειν here has the sense of the Latin "prætermittere," "præterire;" or "relinquere" in this of Virgil, Æn. vi. 509. "Nihil o tibi, amice, relictum." — 92. *Ἀλλ' ἥς. Comp. vs. 90. *Ελαφρόν may be translated alleviation. — *Ἀνυτο φεύγων. Hastened its course flying, i. e. flew swiftly on. Comp. Aristoph. Plut. 229. Av. 242. Bos on the word ὀδδς, Viger, vi. § 2. 5. and Matth. Gr. Gr. § 557. Virgil, Georg. iii. 284. "Sed fugit interea, fugit irreparabile tempus." *Ἀνυτο is Doric for ἦνυτο.

94. Χ' οὕτω τᾶ. For καὶ οὕτω τῇ δούλῃ τὸν ἀληθέα. Virgil, Æn. iv. 8. "Cum sic unanimam alloquitur male sana sororem." — 95. Εἰ δ' ἄγε. Supply the ellipsis thus: εἰ δὲ βούλει, ἄγε. Comp. Schæfer on Bos, p. 590. Hermann de Ellipsis et Pleon. p. 104, and on Viger, p. 870.

96. Πᾶσαν ἔχει με. Virgil, Æn. iv. 22. "Solus hic inflexit sensus, animumque labantem Impulit." — 97. Τήρησον. Watch for him. Comp. Thuc. iii. 22. vi. 2. — 98. Τηνεὶ. Doric for ἐκεῖ, ἐκεῖσε, "illuc:" the second τηνεὶ is for ἐκεῖ, "illic." Comp. i. 106.

Φράζεό μευ τὸν ἔρωθ' ὅθεν ἵκετο, πότνα Σελάνα.

 Φράζεό μευ τὸν ἔρωθ' ὅθεν ἵκετο, πότνα Σελάνα.
 Καί μ' ἐσιδὼν ὦ ἄστοργος, ἐπὶ χθονὸς ὄμματα πήξας,

100. Κῆπεί κά νιν. I. e. καὶ ἐπεὶ ἂν μάθης αὐτὸν ὄντα μόνον, νεῦσον ἥσυχά, καὶ εἶπε, &c. Ἄσυχά is Doric for ἥσυχά, and this for ἡσύχως. Comp. vi. 12.—101. Κῆφ' ὅτι. And tell him this, "Simætha invites thee," &c. For this use of ὅτι, see Hoogeveen, and Viger, viii. § 9. 1. seqq. — Τὸ καλεῖ. Comp. i. 56. — Ὑφαγέο τᾶδε. Doric for ὑφηγοῦ τῇδε, conduct him hither privately. Reiske translates it, "præi viam illi."

102. Ἄγαγε. Doric for ἤγαγε. Λιπαρόχρων is the accusative of λιπαρόχρως, Doric for λιπαρόχρους.—104. Ἄρτι. This particle joined with the present tense signifies now, at this time. See Viger, vii. § 1. Graefe on Meleager, p. 70.—Ἑπὲρ οὐδὸν. Passing over the threshold. The verb ἀμείβεσθαι has the signification of passing in Homer also, II. I. 409. Ἐπεὶ ἔρ κεν ἀμείψεται ἔρκος ὀδόντων. In this signification it is an active verb. So in Euripides, Alcest. 768. κατόλμησ' ἀμείψασθαι πύλας. Comp. Odys. K. 328. and see Wesseling on Herodotus, p. 403. 28.

106. Πᾶσα μὲν ἐψύχθην. Virgil,

Æn. iii. 308. "Diriguit visu in medio: calor ossa reliquit." Comp. Sappho's Ode preserved by Longinus, x. 2. Apollonius Rhod. i. 1261. iii. 954. 965.—107. Κοχύδεσκεν. Ionic imperf. from κοχυδέω, I flow profusely. It properly signifies to flow with noise. Comp. Pherecrates in Athenæus, vi. p. 269.—Νοτίαισιν ἑέρσαις. For κατὰ τὰς ἑρσαις. "Like southern dews distilling from my face." Polwhele. Thus Petronius: "Cum languidus auster Non patitur glaciem resoluta vivere terra, Gurgite sic pleno facies manavit."—109. Κνυζεῦνται. Whine. Comp. Aristoph. Vesp. 977. According to Donatus it is properly said of young foxes.—110. Ἄλλ' ἐπάγην. But I was stiffened all over like a doll. Comp. Apollonius Rhod. iii. 965. Heliodorus, ii. 23. iv. 13. Δαγὺς signifies a child's doll made of wax, wood, or any other substance: it was called κόρη by the Attics. In Callimachus, Hymn. Cer. 92. it is called πλαγγών. See Bast's Epist. Crit. p. 195. "Stiff as this golden necklace." Polwhele.

112. Καί μ' ἐσιδὼν. Koppiers,

Εἴτ' ἐπὶ κλιντῇρι, καὶ ἐζόμενος φάτο μῦθον·
 Ἡ ῥά με, Σιμαίθα, τόσον ἔφθασας, ὅσον ἐγὼ θῆν
 Πρᾶν ποκα τὸν χαρίεντα τρέχων ἔφθαξα Φιλῖνον, 115
 Εἰς τὸ τεὸν καλέσασα τόδε στέγος, ἧ με παρῆμεν.

considering this and the following clause contradictory, proposed, Κοῦ μ' ἐσιδών: "cumque me ne aspexisset quidem, oculis in terram defixis, consedit." Brunck, being of the same opinion, admitted this conjecture into the text, not perceiving that he was charging his author with tautology. But, as Harles observes, the received reading is correct, and clearly marks the perturbed state of the speaker's mind. Vossius correctly interprets it thus: "Cum me ingressus blande intuitus esset, tum oculis ficta pudoris specie in terram demissis crudelis in lecto consedit." — Ὡς τοργος. Doric for ὁ ἱστοργος. This refers to his conduct afterwards. — 114. Ἡ ῥά με. Comp. i. 16. ii. 6. The construction, according to Harles, runs thus: Ἡ ῥα Σιμαίθα, πρὶν ἢ ἐμὲ παρῆναι καλέσασά με εἰς τόδε τὸ σὸν στέγος, τόσον ἐμὲ ἔφθασας, ὅσον ἐγὼ θῆν πρῶην ποτὲ ἔφθασα τρέχων τὸν χαρίεντα Φιλῖνον: "Cum me vocasti ante, quam mea sponte venirem, tantum me prævertisti, quantum ego nupercursu Philinum præverti." Sometimes it serves to connect a proposition with what follows; and sometimes, when it appears to have no such power, it has the force of the Latin “rite,” or “ex ordine,” conformably to nature, or propriety. Hence naturally, as in the present passage.—134. Casaubon and Harles understand ἐχθές in the sense of *late*ly. But see the commentators on Homer, Il. B. 303. and Aristoph. Ran. 738. Ἐμὴν and μέσφα, are Doric for ἐμολ, μέχρι, or μέχρῃς. See Matth. Tibullus also, ii. 1. 87. gives a chariot and horses to the night: "Ludite, jam Nox jungit equos, currumque sequuntur Matris lascivo sidera fulva choro." — 164. Ἐγὼ δ' οἰσῶ. I will bear my grief as I have undertaken it, i. e. according to the proverb: "As I have made my bed, so will I lie." So this verse is generally interpreted; and so Polwhele: "For, as I've borne my griefs, I yet will bear." Harles says ὥσπερ ὑπέσταν is "ut promisi," comparing Euripides, Iphig. Aul. 530. and

Il. iv. 267. Valcken. proposes ὥπερ ὑπέσταν, "cui me subjeci." Jacobs conjectured ἐγὼ δ' ἀνύσω τὸν ἐμὸν πόνον, &c. which he explains thus: "Equidem laborem a me susceptum ita perficiam et absolvam, ut promisi." I will complete the magic rites as I have promised, and devote him to death unless he return. Finkenstein elicits the same sense from the common reading. Finally, Bergler on Alciphron, i. 27. p. 112. explains it, "Ego vero feram meum dolorem, ut suscepi, ὥσπερ ὑπέσταν, sc. αὐτῷ." This is not condemned by Kiessling.

165. Χαῖρε. Comp. Anacreon, i. 10. — 166. Εὐκήλοιο. Tibullus seems to have imitated this in the passage just quoted. — Ἄντυγα. Ἄντυξ here signifies a chariot. Comp. Homer, Il. A. 535.

ΚΩΜΑΣΤΗΣ. THE SERENADER. Κωμαστής, according to Hesychius, signifies a shepherd, who dances and sings at the same time. This, as well as the former Idyl, represents distracted love, in many abrupt and beautiful transitions of passion. Here also the reader's attention is confined to the action and speech of a single personage. A goatherd declares his love for Amaryllis, deploras her cruelty, extols her charms, entreats a return of affection, and in despair resolves to drown himself.

1. Κωμάσδω. I go serenading to Amaryllis; properly, I go singing and dancing to, &c. — Ταὶ δέ. Comp. i. 9. — 2. Βόσκονται κατ' ὄρος. Comp. v. 103. Virgil, Georg. iii. 314. "Pascuntur vero sylvas et summa Lycæi." — Αὐτάς. The final of this word is short in Doric. Comp. i. 134. ii. 160. — 3. Τίτυρ' ἐμὶν. Virgil has closely copied this passage, Ecl. ix. 23. "Tityre, dum redeo, brevis est via: pasce capellas, Et potum pastas age, Tityre, et inter agendum Occursare capro, cornu ferit ille, caveto." Martyn fan-

Some interpret this simply a ridgil, or a ram; others translate κνάκωνα, "caprum;" others again, as Vossius, render it mit weisslichen zotten, "with whitish shaggy hair." See the commentators, and a note of Thysius on the passage of Aulus Gellius above referred to, Variorum ed. p. 551. Κνάκωνα is Doric for κνήκωνα. — 5. Μή τυ. Comp. i. 56.

7. Παρκύπτουσα. Doric and poet. for παρακύπτουσα, peeping forth, i. e. stooping and taking a side-glance from the cave. Portus translates it "procumbens." Παρακύπτειν properly signifies to stoop and peep side-ways into a place in passing by; or, to stoop and look stealthily out of a place. Comp. Aristophanes, Thesm. 797. 15. Νῦν ἔγνων. Theocritus had in his mind the following from Homer, Il. Π. 33. Οὐκ ἄρα σοί γε πατήρ ἦν ἱππότα Πηλεὺς, Οὐδὲ θέτις μήτηρ γλαυκῇ δέ σε τίκτε δάλασσα, Πέτραι τ' ἠρίβατο· ὅτι τοι νόος ἐστὶν ἀπηνής. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 43. 22. Κισσοῖο. This is the genitive of the material. The garland was composed of ivy, interwoven with rose-buds and parsley. Schreber, however, makes it the genitive after καλύκεσσι, and translates them Ephœuknospen, "ivy-buds."—23. Καλύκεσσι. Κάλυξ is properly an unblown flower, a bud; in poetry generally a rose-bud.  φιλον. “By one prophetic orpineleaf I found Your chang'd affection, for it gave no sound, Though on my quickly wither'd, like your love, away.”

Fawkes. Τηλέφιλον, according to Martin, is the orpine, a low plant, whose branches trail on the ground: the leaves are small, roundish, and of a glaucous colour; the flowers small, and of a whitish green. Sprengel, i. 42.
 174. supposes it to be “Sedum Anacampseros.” The leaves of this plant, as also of the poppy and anemone, were used by lovers in a species of divination:
 the leaf, laid on the thumb and forefinger, being smartly struck with the right hand, yielded a sound from which the sentiments of the loved object were guessed. If it produced a clear sound, it was a favourable sign; otherwise the case was hopeless. See Lampe de

"Quamvis ille niger, quamvis tu candidus esses."—36. Τύ μοι ἐνδιαθρύπτῃ. You disdain me. Θρύπτεσθαι, διαθρύπτεσθαι, and ἐνδιαθρύπτεσθαι signify to be luxurious, or depraved by luxury; hence to be capricious and disdainful. Comp. quotation from Horace.—39. Καί κέ με. Comp. i. 6. We read a similar apostrophe in Tibullus, i. 1. 63. "Flebis: non tua sunt duro præcordia ferro Vincita, nec in tenero stat tibi corde silex." He had told her before, vs. 18. that she was "all stone." Such is the fickleness of lovers.

NOMEIΣ. THE SHEPHERDS. This Idyl consists of a low, vulgar dialogue between two hirelings, Battus a shepherd and Corydon a cowherd. The apostrophe of Battus to the deceased Amaryllis, on Corydon's naming her, is very natural, and makes amends for the rest.

1. Εἰπέ μοι. Virgil expresses this almost in the same words, Ecl. iii. 1. "Dic mihi, Damæta, cujum pecus? an Melibœi? Non, verum Ægonis; nuper mihi tradidit Ægon." — Ἦ ῥα. Comp. iii. 7. Φιλώνδα is a Doric genitive for Φιλώνδου. Comp. v. 114.

2. Βόσκειν. Doric for βόσκειν. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 11. and comp. v. 103.

3. Ἦ πά ψε. Do you ever secretly milk them? This kind of theft, as Heinsius observes, was peculiar to hireling shepherds and cowherds. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 5. "Hic alienus oves custos bis mulget in hora." Comp. iii. 7. vii. 149. Πα is Doric for πη, an enclitic without any proper accent, and signifying by any means, some way, somehow, ever. See Hoogeveen. Ψὲ is Doric for αὐτὰς, and as being an enclitic has no accent here. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 15. p. 46. — Τὰ ποθέσπερα. Comp. v. 113.

4. Ἄλλὰ. Οὐδαμῶς is to be supplied before ἀλλὰ. — Ὑφίητι. Doric for ὑφίησι, lets the calves to them. Comp. Homer, Odys. i. 309. Ὁ γέρων means the father of Ægon.

Gr. ii. 22. The Alpheus, which is the largest river in the Peloponnesus, flows by Pisa into the Ionian sea. Pisa was famous for having the Olympic games celebrated in its neighbourhood. Comp. Strabo, viii. 3. 12. and Pomponius Mela, ii. 3. 9.

7. Καὶ πόκα. And when had he ever seen athletic oil with his eyes? Edwards' elucidation of this verse is truly polite and elegant: "And what business has he there, who knows no more of wrestling, than a cow does of a new shilling. Nay, I am sure on't—never saw such a thing as oil in his life!" Here πόκα is Doric for the interrogative πότε; "It was customary for the wrestlers, and other combatants at the Olympic games, to anoint themselves with oil, not only to render their limbs more supple, but likewise that their antagonists might not have any advantage over them." Fawkes. Ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖσιν δρᾶσθαι is a phrase borrowed from Homer, Il. A. 587. Γ. 306. Comp. Porson on Euripides, Orest. 1018. — Ὀπώπη. A Doric form of what grammarians call the second pluperfect, or pluperfect mid. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 198. 4. § 245. in δρᾶω.

8. Φαντί. Comp. ii. 45. — Ἐρίσδεν. Doric for ἐρίζειν. Comp. i. 24. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 11.

9. Κῆμε. Doric for καὶ ἐμέ. — ἤμεν. Comp. ii. 41. What Battus says here is in ridicule of Ægon's being compared to Hercules. Erasmus thinks it an old proverb used to deride the absurdity of an undue preference.

10. Κ᾽ ᾤχετ' ἔχων. And he took with him. Comp. ii. 7. A spade was the badge of a wrestler. See Casaubon, I.ect. Theocr. c. 6. — Εἵκατι τουτόθε μᾶλα. Doric for εἴκοσι ἐντεῦθεν μῆλα. The twenty sheep, which Ægon took with him to Pisa, were doubtless for his support there during the time of his training, for sacrifice, for the entertainment of his friends, &c. Comp. vi. 34. This verse is a continuation of Corydon's discourse from vs. 8, for the cowherd pays no attention to what Battus says in vs. 9. 11.

11. Πείσαι τοι. This is generally interpreted: "Persuaserit, credo, Milo vel lupis, ut statim rabiosi fiant." In order to make sense of which the Scholiast observes, that it is contrary to the nature of wolves to run mad. But wolves are naturally rabid and furious. Hence Kiessling explains it: To induce Ægon to aspire to the Olympic crown, there was no more need of persuasion, than to urge wolves to become rabid and furious. He was as naturally ambitious of the distinction of an athlete, as a wolf is prone to ferocity. The interpretation of Dahl seems preferable. He considers τῶς as put for ὡς, and construes it thus: Milo would persuade Ægon to become instantly, even as furious as wolves. This idea was suggested to Battus by the mention of the twenty sheep in the foregoing verse. For the various attempts at correcting this verse, see the editions of Dahl and Kiessling. — Λύκος. For λύκους. Comp. i. 90. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 69. 8. — Λυσσῆν. Doric for λυσσᾶν.

13. Δειλαῖαι. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 3. "O infelix semper oves."

14. Ἦ μὰν. Assuredly. These particles are used to mark a positive assertion: they are sometimes used also in solemn asseveration. See Viger, viii. § 7. 6. and Homer, Il. K. 57. 20. Λεπτός. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 100. "Heu, heu, quam pingui macer est mihi taurus in ervo." — Χῶ ταῦρος. Comp. i. 100. — Αἴθε λάχοιεν. Battus wishes that the sons of Lampriades might obtain such a lean bull, when their burgesses sacrifice to Juno. — 21. Τῷ Λαμπριάδα. Doric genitive for τοῦ Λαμπριάδου, from the nominative Λαμπριάδης. Lampræ, according to Suidas, were two boroughs of Attica, belonging to the tribe called Ἐρεχθίδς. "Heinsius takes the Lampriadae to have been the inhabitants of Lacinium, a promontory not far from Croton, where there was a celebrated temple erected to Juno. They formerly were opulent, but afterwards reduced to extreme penury and wretchedness." Fawkes. — Ὀκκα. Doric for ὄτε, the κ being doubled poetically. — 22. Κακοχράσμων. Wretched. The Sicilians were in the habit of taunting the Athenians with their poverty, who, in turn, retorted by a charge of licentiousness. This word is peculiar to Theocritus.

23. Καὶ μὰν. Comp. i. 71. — Ἐς στομάλιμνον. To the marsh; properly a lake formed by an irruption of the sea. Comp. Strabo, iv. 1. 8. We are indebted to Casaubon, Lect. Theocr. c. 6. for this reading, which has since been found in one MS. All other MSS. and ancient editions have ἐς τὸ Μάλιμνον, or ἐς τομάλιμνον. Reiske adopts the former, supposing Μάλιμνον the name of a place now unknown. Kiessling conjectured ἐς τὰ Μαλίμνω. — Φύσκω. Phycus was a mountain near Croton. Comp. Cellarius, G. A. ii. 9. The Scholiast supplies μέρη. — 24. Νήαιθον. The herbage on the banks of Neæthus, now Niæto, is said by Swinburne, in his Travels in the Two Sicilies, to be incomparable. Comp. Cellarius, l. c. Lycophron, Alex. vs. 921. — Ὅπα καλὰ πάντα. Virgil, Georg. iii. 143. "Saltibus in vacuis pascant, et plena secundum Flumina, muscus ubi et viridissima gramine ripa." — 25. Αἰγίπυρος. Literally goat's wheat. It is generally translated buckwheat. Some think it means thyme; others suppose it to be the "Ononis"

Livy, xxvi. 24. Cellarius, G. A. ii. 14.—33. Ποταῶον. Doric for προσηῶον, situated towards the east. In some editions this word is written with an ι subscript.—Τὸ Λακίνιον. "Lacinium is a promontory not far from Croton, known in modern geography by the name of Cape delle Colonne, which, with the promontory of Salentum, or St. Maria di Leuca, forms the mouth of the Tarentine gulf, seventy miles wide. The land is very high:—rocks, coarse granite and breccia. On a point impending over the waves are some scattered stones, and a few regular courses of building, said to be the ruins of the School of Pythagoras, and of the temple of Juno Lacinia." Polwhele.—34. Κατεδαίσατο. Devoured. Comp. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 229. Horace says of a glutton, Sat. ii. 8. 23. "Porcius infra, Ridiculus totas simul obsorbere placentas." Athenæus, Philostratus, Ælian, and other ancient writers, tell wonderful stories concerning the appetite and strength of athletic performers. However, it is by no means probable that the thirty days preceding the exhibition were spent in gluttony. The competitors in the race and wrestling, whatever might be the case in boxing, were obliged to live abstemiously. Comp. vs. 10.

40. Αἰ αἰ τῷ σκληρῷ. "The genitive stands alone in exclamations, with and without an interjection, or a word that expresses admiration, indignation, compassion, &c. The article usually accompanies the substantive in the genitive, because the exclamation generally refers to a determinate case; not however in all cases." Matth. Gr. Gr. § 371. The grammarians usually supply ἔνεκα. Gregorius Cor. gives the genitive without an interjection as Attic. Comp. x. 40. xv. 75. Sophocles, Aj. 908. Aristophanes, Nub. 1476. Gr. § 242. and Stephens' Thesaurus, under λαγχάνω.

We find the same sentiment in the Adagia of Erasmus, p. 261. "Nunc pluit, Comp. Hesiod, Ἔργ. 552. and Brunck's Analecta, tom. iii. p. 157.

44. Βάλλε κάτωθε. Edwards' note on this passage is so replete with elegance and refinement, that I cannot resist the temptation to insert it: "Battus accidentally turning his head, sees the calves browsing on the trees. He instantly cries out, βάλλε κάτωθε, &c., and, whilst he is uttering the first words, he and Corydon both set a running together; and when he has uttered the remaining words, both set a hooting together: σίτθ' ὁ λέπαργος.... σίτθ' ὁ Κυμαίθα, &c. Whity goes away before Battus gets to the olives; he, therefore, stops running, and stands still. Cymotha stays where she is, and stirs not an inch. Corydon, therefore, continues running towards her, and swears he will be the death of her!" — Βάλλε. Kiessling thinks this refers to throwing the crook, and cites the following from Homer, Il. Ψ. 845. Ὅσσον τίς τ' ἔβριψε καλαύροπα βουκόλος ἀνὴν, "Ἦδε θ' ἐλισσομένη πέτεται διὰ βοῦς ἀγελαίας. Κάτωθε, and before a vowel κάτωθεν, properly signifies from below, as in Aristophanes, Nub. 232. ‘ΟΔΟΙΠΟΨΟΙ. THE TRAVELLERS, or THE PASTORAL MINSTRELS. Here we have a dialogue between two clowns, Comates, a goatherd, and Lacon, a shepherd. They commence with a mutual interchange of abusive language, and coarse raillery; and at length contend in singing. Morson, a neighbouring woodman, becomes their umpire, and decides in favour of Comates. Virgil imitates this Idyl in his third Eclogue.

1. Τὸν Συβαρίταν. Lacon the Sybarite. Sybaris was an ancient city near Croton, in the bay of Tarentum, which once extended seven miles along the Crates, and gave law to four nations. Nothing of it now remains but a few fragments of aqueducts and tombs. The luxury and effeminacy of its inhabitants was proverbial. See Ælian, V. H. xvi. 23. and Swinburne’s Travels in the Two Sicilies.—2. Νάκος. A goat-skin, used by herdsmen as an outer garment, and also to sleep on. Comp. vs. 15. iii. 25.

3. Οὐκ ἀπὸ τᾶς. Will ye not begone from the fountain? So Aristophanes, Acharn. 872. Comp. iv. 45. Ἀμνίς, “agna,” is a poetical word, and peculiar to Theocritus.

5. Τὰν ποίαν σύριγγα. Virgil, Eccl. iii. 25. “Aut unquam tibi fistula cera Juncta fuit? non tu in trivius, indocte, solebas Stridenti miserum stipula disperdere carmen?”—Τὸ γὰρ πόκα. Sarcastically. Οὐ μὰν, οὐ ταύτας τὰς λιμνάδας, ὦ γαθὲ, Νύμφας, Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw." — Ποππύσδεν. Doric for ποππύζειν, to squeak. For this he uses ποππυλιδόσδεν, vs. 89.

8. Τάν μοι ἔδωκε. Virgil, Ecl. ii. 37. "Damocetas dono mihi quam dedit olim." — ὦ λεύθερε. Comates had called Lacon a slave: the latter now retorts with bitter sarcasm. — Τὴν δέ. Comp. ii. 11. — 9. Ἐκκλέψας ἔβα. For this formula see Viger, vi. § 1. 14. and vi. § 2. 1. seqq. — Ποκά. Comp. i. 24. ii. 45. — 10. Εὐμάρα. Supply νάκος. Eumaras was Comates' master. The Scholiast incorrectly reads εὐμάρα, and explains it by δέρμα. — ἦς τοι. Comp. ii. 90. iv. 49. Τοι is Doric for σοι, the dative put for the genitive after δεσπότη, as is common in the poets. Gregorius, Cor. rightly explains it: Οὐκ ἦν οὐδὲ τῷ δεσπότη σου ἐγκοιμᾶσθαι. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 202. 11.

11. Τό μοι ἔδωκε. Supply νάκος: The speckled goat-skin, which, &c. — Ἀνίκα. Comp. ii. 147. — 12. Τὸ δ', ὦ κακὲ. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 13. "Quæ tu, perverse Menalca, Et, cum vidisti puero donata, dolebas." — 13. Τὰ λοίσθια.

Supply κατὰ. This is used poetically for τὰ τελευταῖα, or, what is more usual, τὸ τελευταῖον.

14. Οὐ μὰν. Assuredly not — no, I swear by Pan, the guardian of our shores, &c. Pan is called ἄκτιος, because altars and temples were often erected to him on the shore, where he was worshipped. Comp. Apoll. Rhod. i. 359. ii. 691. Æschylus, Pers. 448. and Brunck's Analecta, tom. ii. p. 238. Ep. 7. — 15. Τὰν βαίταν. The same as τὸ νάκος. Comp. iii. 25. — Ὁ Καλαίθιδος. I, the son of Calæthis. — 16. Εἰς Κράθιν ἀλοίμαν. May I leap into the Crathis. The river Crathis is said to have derived its name from a goatherd; concerning whom a strange fable is related by Ælian, V. H. vi. 42: The water of the Crathis was said to give a yellow colour to the hair and beard of those who drank it. Comp. Ovid, Met. xiv. 315. and Pausan. vii. 25. Near this river was a temple sacred to Pan. Comp. Strabo, vi. 1. 13.

17. Οὐ ταύτας τὰς. Comates points with his finger towards some shrine, Οὐ τευ τὰν σύριγγα λαθὼν ἔκλεψε Κομάτας.

Virgil, Ecl. iii. 32. “De grege non ausim quicquam deponere tecum.”—Ἐντὶ μὲν οὐδὲν. “Hercules, on his arrival at Dios, a city of Macedonia, saw several people coming out of a temple: being himself desirous to enter and worship, he enquired to whom it belonged. He was informed that it was dedicated to Adonis. On which he exclaimed οὐδὲν ἱερὸν, intimating, that, as Adonis was not a deity, he did not think him deserving of any honour or worship; and that things which made a show of something great and sacred, are often, in reality, ridiculous trifles.” Potter.—22. Διαείσομαι. From the poetical verb διαείδεσθαι. Hales says the preposition in this verb has the signification of contention. Wunderlich, Obs. Crit. p. 166. doubts this signification of διὰ, and thinks it rather signifies continuance.—Ἔστε κ' ἀπείπης. Until you refuse, i. e. until you admit yourself conquered. Comp. i. 6.

23. Ἦς ποτ' Ἀθαναίαν. A sow contended with Minerva. A proverb formerly used, when ignorant persons had the temerity to put themselves in competition with men of learning.—Ἐριν ἤρισεν. Intransitive verbs frequently take a substantive of the same derivation, or of kindred signification, after them in the accusative. Thus also in Latin, “vivere vitam.” See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 408. For the construction of πρὸς with an accusative, see § 404. obs. 1.—ἠνίδε κεῖται. Comp. i. 149. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 29. “Ego hanc vitulam... Depono: tu dic mecum quo pignore certes.”—24. Ὠριφος. Doric for ὁ ἔριφος.—Ἐρειδε. Stake.

25. ὦ κίναδε. Sly, cunning knave! Κίναδος in the Sicilian dialect signified a fox. It is used as a term of reproach in Sophocles, Aj. 1030. and in Aristophanes, Nub. 447. Comp. Cicero, Orat. c. 8. Demosthenes περὶ Στεφ. c. 52.—26. Τίς τρίχας. Comp. Ho-

Brunck, Dahl, and Jacobs read: ἀλλὰ γὰρ οὗ τοι Ὀριφος ἰσοπαλῆς; τοὶ δ' ὁ τράγος οὗτος· ἔρισδε. Gerhard, Lectt. 82. Καὶ γὰρ ἔμε. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 62. "Et me Phœbus amat: Phœbo sua semper apud me Munera sunt."—83. Κάρνεα. A festival observed by the Greeks, and particularly by the Spartans, in honour of Apollo, surnamed Carneus, from Carnus an Arcadian, who was instructed by this god in the art of divination, but afterwards murdered by the Dorians. Apollo, in vengeance of this crime, visited them with a dreadful plague, to avert which they instituted this solemnity. See Potter's Archæol. apples. These are the "aurea mala sylvestri ex arbore lecta" of Virgil. Fawkes and Polwhele translate it chestnuts; others render it crab-apples. Comp. Gregorius, Cor. de Dial. p. 120. and Schneider on Nicander, Alex. 261. — Αἱ μὲν ἔχοντι. The acorns have a rough husk from the scarlet oak. Harles says αἱ ἀπὸ πρίνοιο is an elegant periphrasis for ἀκύλοι πρίνισσι, which Kiessling will not admit. — 95. Αἱ δὲ μελιχραί. But the mountain apples are sweet as honey. 104. Γαυλός. Comp. vs. 54. — 105. Ἔργον Πραξιτέλεως. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 37. “Caelatum divini opus Alcimedontis.” The artist mentioned here, was, according to the Scholiast, one far inferior to the great Praxiteles, who lived under king Demetrius. Kiessling thinks there is no necessity for supposing an inferior artist; he, therefore, explains it, “opus tam egregium ut Praxitelis haberi possit.”

Heinsius thinking it addressed to Lacon, explains it: Οὐχὶ παραφρονεῖς; "Nonne insanis, Lacon? eas igitur ut scillam tibi compares." He adds: "Scilla Lucomones et insani purgabantur." — 121. Reiske thinks γραίας the genitive of the substantive γραῖα, interpreting it, the sepulchre of some old woman.

See Heyne on Virgil, Ecl. ii. 64. "Florentem cytisum sequitur lasciva capella."—Αἰγίλον. The αἰγίλος is a plant at present unknown. Some suppose it to be the "Vitex," or "Agnus castus."—129. Σχῖνον. ΒΟΥΚΟΛΙΑΣΤΑΙ. THE BUCOLIC SINGERS. Damoetas and Daphnis drive their herds together to the same pasture. Having seated themselves by a fountain, they contend in song, the subject being the Loves of Polyphemus and Galatea. Daphnis begins first, and addresses Damoetas, who assumes the character of Polyphemus. This Idyl is inscribed to the poet Aratus, the author of the Phænomena.

1. Δάφνις ὁ βωκόλος. The word βωκόλος is referred by the Scholiast and by Toup as well to Damoetas as to Daphnis. But compare vs. 44. — Εἰς ἓνα χῶρον. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 2. "Compulerantque greges Corydon et Thyrsis in unum." — 2. Ἄρατε. Comp. vii. 98. 102. 122. — ἧς δέ. Comp. ii. 90. — 3. Πυρρὸς. Ruddy. This is said of the first appearance of the beard. The same is expressed by γένυν οἰνωπὸς in Euripides, Phoen. 1176. — ἡμιγένειος. Half-bearded. This is said of a person somewhat older. Comp. Wakefield, Sylv. Crit. P. ii. p. 144. — 4. Μέσῳ ἄματι. At mid-day, at noon. Comp. ii. 86. Θέρεος does not depend upon ἄματι, but must be taken separately: "æstivo tempore."

5. Πρᾶτος. Here for πρότερος. Comp. viii. 5. — ἔρισδεν. The imperfect for the aorist: Gave the challenge. Some say it is a Doric infinitive, in which case ἦν must be supplied. Comp. Schæfer, Mel. Crit. p. 44. Reiske understands the second πρᾶτος in the sense of "major natu."

6. Βάλλει τοι. Comp. v. 8. — 7. Δυσέρωτα. The Scholiast explains δύσεως by ὁ μὴ εἰδὼς ἐρᾶν. Kiessling takes it in the sense of hard-hearted, unrelenting, i. e. that will not return love for love. See note on i. 85. For other significations given to this word in the present passage, see that editor's note.

 Καὶ φεύγει φιλέοντα, καὶ οὐ φιλέοντα διώκει.

Comp. vs. 13. — Καλεῦσα. Comp. ii. 125. — 8. Καὶ τύ. Galatea is represented as a wanton nymph, in love with Polyphemus, and vexed at his indifference, and endeavouring, by every possible means, to make him notice her. — Ποθόρησθα. From the Doric verb ποθόρημι. The second person in ης, both in the subjunctive and indicative of verbs in μι, and the Doric form of verbs in ω, was often lengthened in the old language by the addition of the syllable θα, which has remained in the Æolic, Doric, Ionic, and in some words in the Attic dialect. Comp. vs. 22. 25. and see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 201. p. 318. Others write ποθορῆσθα, Doric and Æolic for προσορᾶς. — 9. Ἀδέα συρίσδων. Virgil, Ec. i. 4. "Tu Tityre lentus in umbra Formosam resonare doces Amaryllida syllavas." — 10. Ἀ δὲ βαῦσδει. The dog is represented as running along the shore, and barking at his own shadow in the water. So Schneider understands this passage. The Commentators, however, in general, take νιν as signifying Galatea. — 12. Ἄσυχα. The same as ἡσύχως, the neuter of the adjective for the adverb. Comp. ii. 100. Some read καχλάζοντα, referring it to the waves. Vossius construes the sentence thus: Τὰ δὲ καλὰ κύματα, ἐπ' αἰγιαλοῖο ἄσυχα καχλάζοντα, φαίνει νιν θέοισαν: which he explains in the following manner: "Pulchri fluctus maris leniter effervescentis (agitationibus sc. et discursibus Galatæ sub aqua latentis) ostendunt vel produnt lascivam puellam, quæ emersa subinde, ut Polyphemi oves et canem, tanquam ipso sibi cariores Polyphemo, malis petat; tum subito in undarum tegmina refugit. Illic sub aqua ludibundam aspiciens canis e littore allatrat; unde pastor metuit, ne puellæ crura, cum e mari progressa fuerit, dilaniet."

13. Φράζεο. Take care. The middle verb φράζεσθαι properly signifies to reflect, or consider. Comp. ii. 69. — Ἐπὶ κνάμαισιν. Tmesis for ἐποροῖσιν, &c. So in the next verse: καταμύξῃ δὲ χροῖα καλόν.

15. Καὶ αὐτόθε. Even of her own accord. Here Galatea comes out of the water, and sports wantonly about the shore, to attract the attention of Polyphemus. — Διαθρύπτεται. Comp. iii. 36. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 404. — Ὡς ἀπ' ἀκάνθας. Like the sun-dried down of the thistle, &c. See Hoogeveen on Viger, ix. § 1. 16. Inconstancy is compared to the dry down of the thistle, which flits here and there in the breeze. Comp. Homer, Odys. E. 327. Nicander, Alex. 126. — 16. Ταὶ καπυραὶ. Comp. ii. 85. — 17. Καὶ φεύγει. velis: ubi nolis, cupiunt ultro." Horace, Sat. i. 2. 107. "Meus est amor huic similis; nam Transvolat in medio posita, et fugientia captat." This is nearly a literal translation of Callimachus, Epigr. 33, — 18. Καὶ τὸν ἀπὸ γραμμᾶς. And she moves the stone from the line; a proverbial expression signifying that she is resorting to the last shift. The lines traced on a board for playing the game περτεία, somewhat resembling chess, were called γραμμαί. The line in this game, from which the pebble was moved only in the extremity, was called γραμμὴ ἱερὰ. Hence the proverb ἀπὸ γραμμῆς ἱερᾶς κινεῖ λίθον. See Bos; Ellips. in v. γραμμῇ, p. 91. ed. Schæf. "The original, allusive probably to the game of chess, appears to be a proverbial saying, expressing a false step; or a situation not warranted by the rules of propriety. She moves her King from his proper place, or from the line into check, contrary to the rules of chess. In other words, Galatea, blinded by passion, flies her lover; and follows her scorner — a false move in the game of love." Polwhele. Reiske derives the expression from the "stadium," the remote boundary of which also was called γραμμῇ, and marked by a stone. See his note in Kiessling's edition. — Ἡ

21. Ἀνίκα. Comp. ii. 147. — 22. Κοῦ μ' ἔλαθε. And she did not escape me, — no, I swear by this my single precious eye. Ὀφθαλμὸν is to be supplied. See Bos, Ellips. p. 759. With οὐ τὸν ἐμὸν compare iv. 17. vii. 39. — Ὡς ποθόρημι. With which I shall see till death in despite of Telemus. The present for the future. Comp. iv. 28. — 23. Ἐς τέλος. Supply βίου. See Bos, Ellips. in v. βίος. Some interpret ἐς τέλος, "in perpetuum." See D'Orville, Charit. p. 460. Ovid, Met. xiii. 771. Comp. ii. 161. — Ἀφίσα. Doric for αἰνούσα, from αἶνω, a poetical verb for ἀκούω. — 27. Ζαλοῖ με. She becomes jealous of me. — 28. Οἰστρεῖ. She rushes furiously. Comp. Val. Flac. iii. 581. and Euripides, Iph. A. 77.

29. Σῖγα δέ. Supply ἐπιτάσσω, or κελεύω, and take σῖγα adverbially in the sense of ἡσυχῶς: Σῖγα δέ κελεύω καὶ τᾷ κυνὶ ὑλακτεῖν νιν. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 146. obs. — Καὶ γὰρ ὅκ' ἤρων. "For when I lov'd, he fawn'd and gently whin'd, And softly on her knees his head reclin'd." Polywhele. Horace, speaking of Cerberus fawning upon Bacchus, expresses himself almost in the same words, Od. ii. 19. 30.

"leniter atterens

34. Καὶ γὰρ θην. Virgil, Ecl. 25. "Nec sum adeo informis: nuper in littore vidi, Cum placidum venisset mare." Ovid, Met. xiii. 84. "Certe ego me novi, liquidæque margine vidi Nuper aquæ: placuitque mihi mea forma videnti." Portus calls θην in this verse an expletive. It has the same signification as δη, and may be translated indeed. — 35. Πρᾶν. Comp. ii. 115. — Ἦς δέ. Comp. ii. 90. — 36. Καλὰ δ' ἐμὴν. Comp. ii. 144. Κώρα is Doric for κόρη, the pupil of the eye, put for the eye itself.

ΘΑΛΥΣΙΑ. THE FESTIVAL OF FIRST-FRUITS in honor of Ceres; — HARVEST-HOME. Comp. Homer, Il. I. 530. and Spanheim on Callimachus, Hymn. Cer. vss. 20. and 137. In some MSS. and several editions a second title is added: ἡ Ἑαρινὴ Ὀδοιπορία, or The Vernal Voyage. But as the feast of the First-fruits was celebrated in Autumn, this has been rejected by modern editors. Heinsius thinks this Idyl may be entitled The Vernal Voyage of Ageanax. — The poet gives an account of a journey in company with two friends, Eucrytus and Amyntas. As they proceed they meet Lycidas a goatherd, and agree to beguile the way with singing. "In the Thalysia there is a novelty of form, an originality of combination, in every part delightful. We at first regret the interruption of Lycidas, since we had promised ourselves exquisite pleasure at the Harvest-feast: but eager as we are to see our poet and his friends at the end of their journey, we are soon reconciled to the Cretan goatherd, and thank him for his charming music. At the feast of Ceres, however, the interest of the piece is wonderfully heightened, and our enthusiasm called forth, amidst the most variegated landscape, the most elegant assemblage of rural imagery to be met with in Theocritus." Polwhele Warton, Reiske, and some others thin this Idyl was not written by Theocritus.

1. Ἦς χρόνος. Simichidas explains the cause of his journey. Comp. ii. 90. — Ἀλεντα. A river in the island of Cos, mentioned also by Moschus, iii. 98. Another river of this name occurs in Theocritus, v. 123. — 2. Εἵρπομες. Comp. i. 105. v. 44. — Ἐκ πόλιος. From Cos, the chief city in the island of the same name. — Ἀμμιν. Comp. i. 15. — 3. Τᾷ Διοῖ. A poetical form for τῇ Δήμητρι, to Ceres. — 4. Εἴ τί περ ἐσθλόν. That is, ἐσθλοῖ, εἴ τί περ ἐσθλόν, &c. Good, if anything good remains of the ancient nobility: or, as the Scholiast explains it: εἴ τί ἐστὶν ἀγαθὸν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐτι ὄντων ἀρχαίων ἀγαθῶν τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς Κλυτίας τε, καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ Χάλκωνος, οὗτοί εἰσι τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἐκείνο. Similar forms of expression occur in Theocritus, Epigr. xvi. 4. Apollonius Rhod. iii. 347. Horace, Sat. i. 6. 1. Comp. Kuster on Aristophanes, Eccl. 53. and Hemsterhuis on Lucian, tom. i. p. 171. — 5. Χαῶν τῶν ἐπάνωθεν. "Ex nobilibus antiquis." Χαῶς is the same as χαῖς, good, noble. — Ἀπὸ Κλυτίας. From Clytia and from her son Chalcon.

This is put in apposition with χαῶν τῶν ἐπάνωθεν. See the Scholiast, according to whom Clytia was the daughter of Merops, and married Eurypilus, king of the Coans. Her son Chalcon succeeded to the kingdom of Cos. Comp. Homer, Il. B. 677.—6. Ἐκ ποδός. I. e. ποδί. Having impressed his knee firmly on the rock, he caused the fountain to gush forth with a kick of his foot. So Valckenaer.—8. Ἐφαινον. “Reddebant,” “efficiebant.” So the Scholiast: ἐποίου. Brunck reads ἐφαινον, which Graefe thinks more elegant. Thus Virgil, Ecl. ix. 41. “Hic candida populus antro Imminet, et lente texunt umbracula vitæ.”—9. Χλωροῖσιν πετάλοισι. Springing into an arched shade with their verdant foliage. Comp. Virgil, Ecl. ii. 3. and Horace, Od. i. 21. 5. Koepfen on Homer, Il. A. 45. observes that all adjectives, compounded of ἐρέφω, imply an idea of covering like an arch. Wakefield, Sylv. Crit. P. i. p. 121. reads thus: Αἵγειροί πτελέαι τε κατηρεφές κομόσσαι Χλωροῖσιν πετάλοισιν εὖσκιον ἄλσος ἔφαινον. His object might be attained, however, without this transposition of the hemistichs, by simply removing the point after ἔφαινον.

10. Κοῦπω τὰν μεσάταν. The particles οὐκῶ. . . καὶ are equivalent to the Latin “nondum . . . cum,” the καὶ standing for δε. See Hoogeveen on Viger, p. 523. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 59. “Hinc adeo media est nobis via: namque sepulcrum Incipit apparere Bianoris.” The tombs of heroes and other eminent persons were usually erected by the road side. Hence the origin of epitaphs beginning with the words “Siste viator.”—12. Ἐν Μοίσαισι. By the favour of the Muses. Comp. ii. 28.—Κυδωνικόν. A native of Cydon in Crete, now called Canea.—13. Οὐδέ κέ τίς μιν. And any person having seen him, could not have mistaken him.

Comp. iii. 5.—Νέας ταμίσοιο. Redolent of fresh rennet. Τάμισος is a Doric word, of the same signification as πυρία, rennet, i. e. the liquor found in the stomach of young calves and other animals, used for coagulating milk in the manufacture of cheese, and also in dressing skins. Comp. xi. 66. Harles translates the passage: “Pellem hirco recens detractam redolet.” The Scholiast accounts for the smell of the rennet, by saying, that cheese-makers, for want Homer, Odys. x. 184.—18. Ζωστῆρι πλακερῷ. Toup explains this as being a girdle of twisted rope. Schneider, deriving πλακερὸς from πλάξ, pronounces it to be of the same signification as πλατὺς.—Ἀγριελαίω. Harles says this is put for ἀπὸ ἀγριελαίου, "ex oleastro." See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 374. Comp. vs. 64.—19. Κορύναν. Comp. vs. 43.—Καὶ μ' ἀτρέμας. And showing his teeth he mildly addressed me with a smiling countenance. Σεσαρῶς is Doric for σεσηρῶς, perf. part. of σαίρειν, to open the mouth and show the teeth like angry dogs. Hence to grin with anger, or malice, or sarcastically. Comp. xx. 14. Here it merely signifies to open the mouth widely, as rustics sometimes do.—20. Χεῖλες. For a smile adhered to (hung upon) his lips.

21. Πᾶ δὴ τὸ. Comp. ii. 19. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 1. "Quo te, Mosri, pedes? an, quo vis ducit, in urbem?" Theocritus is represented by the name Simichidas.—Μεσαμέριον. Adverbially. Comp. i. 15. x. 48. Toup conjectured μεσαμέριος, which Brunck received into the text. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 446. 8.—22. Ἀνίκα δὴ καὶ. Virgil, Ecl. ii. 9. "Nunc virides etiam occultant spineta lacertos." Comp. ii. 58. Brunck translates αἵμασι, "maceria," a wall of dry stones: Harles renders it Hecke, "a hedge." Comp. i. 47.—23. Ἐπιτυμβίδιοι κορυθαλλίδες. The crested larks. Comp. vs. 141. Some say these birds are called ἐπιτυμβίδιοι from the circumstance of having a crest resembling a cippus; others say, with more probability, from the peculiar habit of this species of lark, of sitting upon hillocks, low walls, stones in the field, and on low pillars, used as tomb-stones, and so frequenting tombs.—ἡλαίνονται. For ἀλάτται. Ἠλαίνω for ἀλάσμαι is, according to Portus, peculiar to Theocritus. Ἀλάττω, however, occurs in Euripides, Cyclops, 79.—25. Ὡς τεῦ. Comp. v. 19. "For such your speed, the pebbles on the ground, Dash'd by your clogs, at every step resound." Fawkes. Ἀρβυλὶς was a kind of wooden shoe, armed with iron nails, peculiar to the Boeotians, with which they used to tread the grapes in the wine-press.

27. Φαντὶ τὸ. Comp. i. 56. ii. 45.

— 30. Καί τοι. Although I hope to claim equality with you. — 31. Ἀ δ' ὁδὸς. But this journey of mine is to the festival of Ceres. — Ἡ γὰρ. Comp. i. 16. — 32. Εὐπέπλω Δαμάτερι. Ceres was said to have worn a black veil, either as a sign of sorrow for the loss of Proserpine, or to conceal her grief from observation. See Hoole's translation of Homer's Hymn to Ceres. The veil was used in very early times as an ornamental part of dress. — 33. Ὀλβω ἀπαρχόμενοι. Offering the first-fruits of their wealth. — Μάλα γάρ. Virgil, Georg. i. 95. "Neque ipsum Flava Ceres alto nequicquam spectat Olympo."

35. Ἀλλ' ἄγε δὴ. But come now. Comp. Homer, Il. E. 718. Homer writes ἀλλ' ἄγε νῦν, Il. Z. 340. 354. See Hoogeveen, and Viger, viii. § 5. 5. seqq. — ξυνὰ γὰρ ὁδὸς. For the way is common, the day is common. A proverbial expression, which is well illustrated by Symmachus, Epist. ix. 1. "Omnibus in hac vita positus ac locatus communis est cœli spiritus et lux diæi." Comp. Apoll. Rhod. i. 336.

iii. 172. Ἀὖς is put for ἡμέρα. See Schrader on Musæus, vs. 110. and Gesner on Orpheus, Argon. 652. ed. Herman. — 36. Βωκολιασδόμεσθα. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 64. "Cantantes licet usque, minus via lædet, eamus." — Ἄλλον. For ἕτερον. Comp. vi. 46. and Schrader on Musæus, p. 151.

37. Καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 32. "Et me fecere poëtam Pierides: sunt et mihi carmina: me quoque dicunt Vatem; sed non ego credulus illis." — Καπυρὸν. Ardent, or glowing, literally: Harles and Portus interpret it eloquent; Kiessling, clear-sounding, sonorous. Comp. ii. 85. vi. 16. — 39. Οὐ Δᾶν. Comp. iv. 17. — Οὐ γάρ πω. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 35. "Nam neque adhuc Vario videor, nec dicere Cinna Digna, sed argutos inter strepere anser olores." — 40. Σικελίδαν. Asclepiades, the son of Sicelidas. The father's name is put for the son's. Asclepiades was a Samian poet, a writer of epigrams. Philetas was a native of Cos. Both are mentioned in the beautiful Idyl which Moschus wrote on the death of Bion, vs. 96. seqq.

43. Τάν τοι κορύναν. Virgil, Ecl. v. 88. "At tu sume pedum." Comp. vs. 19. Δωρύττομαι is Doric for δωρέομαι. The common editions have the future δωρήσομαι. See Gregorius Cor. de Dial. p. 294. — Οὐνεκεν ἐσσί. Because thou art a son of Jove wholly formed for truth. Comp. Pindar, Isthm. 47. Euripides, Phoen. 198.

45. Ὅστις ἐρευνῇ. Constr. ὅστις ἐρευνᾷ τελέσαι δόμον Ἴσον κορυφῇ ὄρους Ὀρομέδοντος. Oromedon was a very high mountain in the island of Cos, and took its name from a giant slain and buried there. — 47. Καὶ Μοισᾶν ὄρνιχες. Comp. v. 48. Poets are often called the birds of the Muses. Horace, Od. i. 6. l. calls Varius a bird of Mæonian song:

"Scriberis Vario fortis, et hostium Victor, Mæonii carminis aliti."
 Comp. Callimachus, Hym. Del. 252. D'Orville, Van. Crit. vii. 5. p. 149. — Χῖον αἰοδόν. Homer. — 48. Ἀντία κοκκ. "Who crow defiance to the Chian bard." Fawkes. But κοκκίζειν here signifies to croak; in verse 124. to crow.

50. Κήγᾶ μὲν. Supply ἄρξομαι, or ἀείσω. — Ὀρη φίλος. "Vide amice." Comp. Valckenaer, Adonias. p. 305. —

51. Ὁ τι πρᾶν ἐν ὄρει. "The strains I lately labour'd on the hill." Pot-whale. Virgil, Ecl. v. 13. "Immo hæc, in viridi nuper quæ cortice fagi Carmina descripsi, et modulans alterna notavi, Experiar." Comp. Ecl. ix. 21. Heinsius for πρᾶν ἐν ὄρει reads with Eustathius πρᾶν ὄρη, "nuper vere novo." Comp. Valckenaer Adonias. p. 366. — Ἐξεπόνασα. Comp. Valckenaer on Euripides, Phoen. 1642.

52. Καλὸς πλόος. This poem of Lycidas seems to have given Horace the hint for the third ode of the first book, on Virgil's voyage. — 53. Χῶταν ἐφ' ἐσπερίοις. And when the south wind attendant upon the setting Kids, &c. The time alluded to is about the middle of December. See Aratus, Phoen. 678. The Kids are two stars in the left hand of the constellation Auriga. Their rising and setting were considered dangerous to sailors. Virgil, Æn. ix. 668. "Quantus ab occasu veniens, pluvialibus Hædis, Verberat imber humum." Horace, Od. iii. l. 26.

"Neque

Tumultuosum sollicitat mare
 Nec sævos Arcturi cadentis Impetus aut orientis Hædi."

l. 372. Statius, Theb. viii. 407. seqq. Colum. xi. 2. 78.—54. Κῶρίων δτε. And when Orion rises, i. e. about the second week in March. Virgil, Æn. x. 763. "Quam magnus Orion, Cum pedes incedit medii per maxima Nerei Stagna, viam scindens, humero supereminet undas." Orion is called by the poets "nimbosus," "sævus," "nautis infestus," &c. Comp. Mitsch. on Horace, Od. i. 28. 21. iii. 27. 17.

57. Χάλκυόνες. In spring if the halcyon, or kingsfisher, confined itself to the shore, the ancients dreaded an impending storm; but when that bird entrusted itself to the ocean, they expected fine weather. See the story of Ceyx in Ovid, Met. xi. 410. seqq.—στορσεῦντι. Virgil, Ecl. ix. 57. "Et nunc omne tibi stratum silet æquor." Comp. Odys. Γ. 158. Apoll. Rhod. i. 1154.—58. Ἐσχατα φυκία. The lowest sea-weed, i. e. that which lies at the bottom of the sea.

59. Ταί τε μάλιστα. Which of all birds that have their living from the sea are most beloved, &c.—60. Ἐφίλαθεν. Doric for ἐφιλήθησαν. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 205. 6.

61. Διζημένῳ. Seeking, literally. Kiessling interprets it "ingressó."—62. ὦρια. Favorable. Comp. vs. 85.

63. Τῇνο κατ' ἄμαρ. Comp. ii. 86.—64. Ἡ καὶ λευκοῖων. Comp. vs. 18. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 374. For φυλάσσαν, Kiessling conjectured πυκασδων. Some think it put for φέρων.—65. Τὸν Πτελεατικόν. Cosian wine, so called from Ptelea in the island of Cos. Virgil, Ecl. v. 70. "Ante focum, si frigus erit; si messis, in umbra, Vina novum fundam calathis Ariusia nectar."—67. Χὰ στιβάς. And my couch shall be heaped up to my elbow. Comp. vs. 132. and Anacreon, iv. 1. seqq.—68. Κνύζα. Comp. iv. 25.—Ἀσφοδέλῳ. Asphodel, otherwise called king's-spear, or day-lily.

70. Αὐταῖσιν κυλίκεσσι. Comp. Horace, Od. i. 35. 27. iii. 15. 16. Asphodel. Plut. 1085.

 Κηρία φερβόμενος, ἔτος ὥριον ἐξεπόνασας. 85
 Αἶθ' ἐπ' ἐμεῦ ζωοῖς ἐναρίθμιος ὠφελὲς ἦμεν,

71. Αὐλησεῦντι. Virgil, Ecl. v. 72. "Cantabunt mihi Damoetas et Lycius Ægon." — 73. Ξενέας. This is generally supposed to be a proper name. Heinsius, however, shows it to be only an appellative noun, signifying a certain damsel. So ξένος Ἀθηναῖος signifies a certain Athenian. Buttmann conjectured Ἐχένας. The nymph loved by Daphnis was named Echenais. — 74. Καὶ ὡς δρύες. Virgil, Ecl. x. 13. "Illum etiam lauri, illum etiam flevire myricæ." — 75. Ἰμέρα. Comp. v. 124. — 76. Εὔτε χιὼν ὥς τις. When like any snow, &c. Comp. Callimachus, Hym. Cer. vs. 92. — 77. Ἡ Ἀθῶ. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 44. "Aut Tmarus, aut Rhodope, aut extremi Garamantes." Georg. i. 332. "Aut Atho, aut Rhodopen, aut alta Ceraunia."

79. Κακαῖσιν. By the wanton cruelty of his master. Palmerius, Exerc. p. 801, thinks the confining of Comates in a chest alludes to the condemnation of Philoxenus the lyric poet, to a dungeon, by Dionysius the tyrant of Sicily. See Meursius on Lycophr. vs. 239.

80. Ὡς τέ νιν αἱ σιμαὶ. And how the flat-nosed bees, coming to the sweet cedar, fed him with soft flowers from the meadow. — 81. Κέδρον. The chest, which was made of this wood.

83. Τὸ θῆν. Thou truly. Porus explains θῆν by the Latin "diu." Πεπόνθης he translates "fruitus es;" Kiessling renders it "expertus es." — 85. ἔτος ὥριον. Thou didst spend a pleasant time. Comp. vs. 62. Homer, Il. A. 691. Some translate ἔτος ὥριον, a whole spring; others think it signifies a summer. Heinsius renders it "vet et æstatem." Comp. Zeune on Viger, p. 162. and Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 577. For ἐξεπόνασας in the sense of ἐξετέλεσας, see the commentators on Euripides, Phoen. 1662.

86. Αἶθ' ἐπ' ἐμεῦ. Constr. αἶθ' ὠφελὲς εἶναι ἐναρίθμιος ζωοῖς ἐπ' ἐμεῦ. Oh!

Ὡς τοι ἐγὼν ἐνόμειον ἀν' ὄρεα τὰς καλὰς αἴγας, that thou wert numbered with the living in my days! Comp. Aristoph. Acharn. vs. 210. Virgil, Ecl. x. 35. "Atque utinam ex vobis unus, vestrique fuisset Aut custos gregis, aut maturæ vinitor unæ!" — 88. Φωνᾶς εἰσαΐων. Supply αἶας. Listening to thy voice.

90. Τὸν δὲ μέτ' αὖθις. After him in turn. For this anastrophe together with the interposition of the particle δὲ, see Hermann de Emend. Rat. Gr. Gr. p. 107. — 93. Τὰ που καὶ Ζανὸς. A kind of proverbial expression, used in speaking of exquisite poetry, &c. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 73. "Partem aliquam, xanti, Divum referatis ad aures." Comp. Ecl. v. 73. — 94. Ὡς τυ γεραίρεν. With which I will begin to honour thee. Comp. i. 56. The verb γεραίρεν is used in the same sense by Homer, Il. H. 321. — 95. Ἐπλεο. Doric and Ion. for ἐπλεον, and this by syncope for ἐπέλεον, imperfect of the poetical verb πέλεμαι, I am.

96. Ἐπέπτарον. Sneezing was sometimes accounted a lucky omen, as here, and in Idyl xviii. 16. Compare a lovely little poem of Catullus, de Acme et Septimio, the forty-fifth in Doering's edition, part of which stands thus in Dr. Nott's spirited translation of that poet:

"The God of Love, at length content,
Drew forth his golden dart;
And sneezing, from the right, consent,
It sunk in Acme's heart."

Thus Propertius, ii. 3. 23. "Num tibi nascenti primis, mea vita, diebus Aureus argutum sternuit omen Amor." Add Homer, Odys. P. 545. and Burmann on Ovid, Heroid. xix. 151.

98. Τὰ πάντα. In every respect. — Ἀνέρι τήνῳ. For ἐμοί. — 99. Παιδὸς. This depends on πόθον: Is possessed with a passion for a certain damsel. — Ἀριστις. A person of this name is mentioned by Suidas as one of the disciples of Aristarchus.

103. Ὀμόλας. Homole was a mountain of Thessaly, near Othrys, the seat of the Centaurs. Comp. Virgil, Æn. vii. 674.—104. Ἀκλήταν. I. e. coming of her own accord.

106. Μή τί τυ παῖδες. This alludes to a festival of Pan, which was celebrated in Arcadia, the favorite retreat of that God. At this festival, the Arcadian youth, if they missed their prey in hunting, used to beat the statue of Pan, whom they considered the president of their sports, with squills, or sea-onions. See Spanheim on Callimachus, ii. p. 520.

109. Εἰ δ' ἄλλως νεύσαις. "Sin vero alio inclinaveris." Valcken. i. e. if you do not grant my request.—110. Κνάσαιο. Comp. iii. 29. v. 122.

111. Εἷης δ' Ἡδωνῶν. Virgil, Ecl. x. 65. "Nec si frigoribus mediis Hebrumque bibamus, Sithoniasque nives hyemis subeamus aquosæ: Nec si cum moriens alta liber aret in ulmo, Æthiopum versemus oves sub sidere Cancræ." The Edoni were a people of Thrace near the Strymon. Comp. Apollodor. iii. 5. and Barthius on Statius, Theb. v. 78. They are put here for the Thracians in general.—12. Ἐβρον. The Hebrus, now called Mærisza, is the largest and broadest river in Thrace. Παρ is Doric for παρά. Comp. i. 33.—Τετραμμένος ἐγγύθεν. The same as τετραμμένος πρὸς ἄρκτον, "conversus ad arcton." So κεκλιμένος, or κλιθεὶς ἄρκτῳ. See Musgrave on Sophocles, Trach. 101.—114. Βλεμύων. The Blomyes were a people of the remotest part of Æthiopia. Comp. Mela, i. 4. Cellarius, iii. 8. 16.

122. Μηκέτι τοι. Horace, Od. iii. 10. 19. "Non hoc semper erit liminis aut aquæ Coelestis patiens. Comp. Propert. i. 16. 23. seqq.—123. Ὀρθριος. The same as ὀρθρινός. Comp. Aristoph. Eccl. 741.—124. Νάρκαισιν. Some render this torpidity; others drowsiness. Toup by νάρκαι ἀνιηραὶ understands the morning cold, which is generally more intense at the dawn. Horace, Sat. ii. 6. 45. "Matutina parum cautos jam frigora mordent." The passage is thus translated by Polwhele: "Then, dear Aratus! let us watch no more, Nor wear, with nightly

125. Εἰς δ' ἐπὶ τᾷσδε. With such toil may the wretch Molon alone be tortured. Παλαίστρα is put figuratively for the toil, fatigue, and anxiety that lovers have to endure in such situation. —127. Ἄτις ἐπιφθύσδοισα. Comp. ii. 62. vi. 39. Tibullus, i. 2. 53. "Hæc mihi composuit cantus, queis fallere posses: Ter cane, ter dictis despuæ carminibus." Comp. Griffiths on Æschylus, P. V. 1070.

130. Πύξας. This is supposed to be a city in the island of Cos, where there was a temple to Apollo.—131. Εἶρφ' ὁδόν. Hastened on the way, &c.—Ἐς Φρασιδάμω. To the dwelling of Phrasidamus.—132. Ἐν τε βαθείαις. On high couches of sweet-smelling lentisk. Comp. vs. 67.

135. Ὑπερθε κατὰ. From above over our head. Comp. Homer, II. E. 659. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 581. 3.—136. Αἴγειροι. Αἴγειρος is the black poplar. See Spanheim on Callimachus, H. C. vs. 38.—137. Κελάρυσδε. Murmured. This verb is properly applied to water descending from an eminence, or rolling over rocks; κελάδειν to rivers flowing with a gentle murmuring.

138. Τοὶ δὲ ποτὶ. Comp. i. 80.—Αἰθαλίωνες. Summer-loving. So Finkenstein, sommerlustig; so also the Scholiast, τοῦ ἡλίου χαίροντες. Some translate it ash-coloured, others dusky. —139. Τέττιγες. Balm-crickets. Τέττιξ is often translated grasshopper; but incorrectly. The balm-cricket is a larger insect than the grasshopper, and

ΒΟΥΚΟΛΙΑΣΤΑΙ΄. THE BUCOLIC SINGERS. Menalcas, a shepherd; and Daphnis, a neatherd, both proud and boastful of their musical abilities, contend in Amœbæan song; that is, in strains sung alternately, and consisting of an equal number of verses. They stake their pastoral pipes as the reward of victory, and choose a goat-herd as their umpire. The prize is adjudged to Daphnis.—It appears probable that the ancient shepherds actually contended in this manner; and like the modern improvisatori of Italy, were, from habit, extremely quick in extemporaneous conception and expression. Extempore composition of this kind, as we learn from Livy, was practised by certain Tuscans at Rome, long before the time of Theocritus.—The chief beauty of the eighth Idyl, says Warton, consists in the diversity of character between the neatherd and the shepherd. Daphnis feeds oxen, and Menalcas sheep; and the allusions of both respect their proper pursuit. The one never invades the province of the other,

2. Ὡς φαντί. Pierson, in his Verisimilia, p. 46. for ὡς φαντί, reads Διόφαντε, observing that Theocritus addressed this Idyl to his friend Diophantus, the person to whom he inscribes the twenty-first. Reiske objects to the alteration. This passage is thus imitated by Virgil, Ecl. vii. 2. "Compulerantque greges Corydon et Thyrsis in unum: Thyrsis oves, Corydon distentas lacte capellas. Ambo florentes ætatibus, Arcades ambo: Et cantare pares, et respondere parati."

3. "Αμφω τῶγ' ἦτην. Both of them were red-haired, both were young. Collins gives the epithet "fiery-tressed" to the sons of the Dane. "Αναῖος, i. e. ἄνησος, properly signifies wanting the down on the chin. Comp. vs. 93. Wakefield, *Sylv. Graefe takes πυρρότριχος in the same sense. Comp. vi. 3.—4. Συρίσδεν δεδαημένῳ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. §202.

must be construed with νικασεῖς, as is evident from vss. 7. 84.

11. Χρήσδεις ὦν. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 28. "Vis ergo inter nos, quid possit uterque, vicissim Experiamur." — Χρήσδεις καταθεῖναι. Will you stake as a prize?

13. Θησεύμεσθα. Doric and poet. for θησόμεθα, and this for καταθησόμεθα. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 212. 2.

14. Μόσχον ἐγὼ θησῶ. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 29. "Ego hanc vitulam, ne forte recuses, Depono." — Ἰσομάτορα. As full-grown as the mother. This Virgil expresses by "pariterque caput cum matre ferentem," Æn. ix. 528. on which see Heyne. Pierson conjectured λιπομάτορα, i. e. "lacte depulsum," as in Horace, Od. iv. 4. 15.

18. Ἐννεάφωνον. Though the shepherd's pipe is here called nine-toned, yet it was generally composed of seven unequal reeds, and consequently was only seven-toned. "Est mihi disparibus septem compacta cicutis Fistula." Virgil, Ecl. ii. 36. It is probable that the ancient shepherds first played over the tune, and then sung a stanza of the song answering thereto; and so played and sung alternately. Comp. Virgil, Ecl. v. 14. — 19. Λευκὸν καρὸν. The shepherd's pipe was compacted with wax. Comp. i. 129. — ἴσον... ἴσον. A similar example of the same word having the first syllable long and short in the same verse, occurs in Homer, Il. E. 31. Ἄρες, Ἄρες, &c.

21. Ἦ μάν τοι. I too indeed, &c. The particles ἦ μὴν are a formula used in solemn asseveration. See Viger, vii. § 7. 5. and Hoogeveen, xxi. § 3. 13. who notices the union of the three particles in the present passage, where they have merely the force of serious assertion.

23. Τὸν δάκτυλον ἀλγῶ. Thus Plato, Rep. v. p. 462. ὁ ἄνθρωπος τὸν δάκτυλον ἀλγεῖ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 424.

See Hoogeveen, Part. Gr. p. 551. ed. Schutz. Reiske circumflexes πῶς, and puts a note of interrogation after ὑλακτεῖ. Graefe points the verse thus: Τῶν, πῶς; ἐταῦθα τὸν αἰπόλον ἦν καλέσαμεν! See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 200.

27. Ὡι ὁ κύων. The dative for the genitive, as is common in the poets. — φαλαρός. White. This in Idyl v. 104. is the name of a ram.

28. Ἐπακούσας. Having heard them. So Kiessling: "voce audita." Some others translate it "obsequutus."

29. Ἰυκτὰ. An ancient form for ἰυκτῆς, i. e. ὁ συρικτῆς, ὁ λιγύφθογγος. So εὐρύπα for εὐρύπης in Homer. Harles calls it Doric; Portus says it is a Macedonian form.

31. Εἶτα δ' ἀμοιβαίην. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 18. "Alternis igitur contendere versibus ambo Coepere." — Hos Corydon, illos referebat in ordine Thyrsis."

33. Θεῖον γένος. This refers to ποταμοί. — 34. Πά ποκα. Comp. i. 66. ii. 67. xi. 66. — 35. Ἐκ ψυχᾶς. This corresponds exactly with our English phrase, with all my heart. And so it is explained by Harles: "Ex animi mei sententia, prout ipse ego volo atque cupio." Graefe refers ψυχᾶς to ποταμοί as being deities of race divine. Others refer it to τὰς ἀμνίδας, and translate it, to their hearts' content. Comp. v. 3. — 36. Μηδὲν ἔλασσον ἔχοι. I. e. may he fare as well.

37. Γλυκερὸν φυτὸν. The singular for the plural. Brunck with four MSS. reads γλυκερὰ φυτὰ, not so correctly as regards the metre. The Scholiast properly interprets αἵπερ ὁμοῖον by εἵπερ ὁμοίως: If Daphnis sing equally as well, &c. Edwards translates it "si quid simile." — 40. Τεῖνδε. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 150. Obs. 1. — Χαίρων ἀφθονα. Freely and plentifully.

Χαίρων is equivalent to the Latin "gratis." See Viger, v. § 14. 6. and my note on Longinus, xvi. 3. The Latin translators generally render it "lætus."

41. Παντᾶ. Doric for παντῇ, everywhere. These are written without an iota subscript. See Buttmann's Gr. Gr. § 116. Obs. 8. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 59. "Phyllidis adventu nostræ nemus omne virebit." Comp. vs. 53. seqq.—43. Αἱ δ' ἂν ἀφέρπη. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 55. "At si formosus Alexis Montibus his abeat, videas et flumina sicca." Pope has finely imitated both Theocritus and Virgil: "All nature mourns, the skies relent in showers, Hush'd are the birds, and clos'd the drooping flowers: If Delia smile, the flowers begin to spring, The skies to brighten, and the birds to sing. All nature laughs, the groves are fresh and fair, The sun's mild lustre warms the vital air: If Sylvia smile, new glories gild the shore, And vanquish'd nature seems to charm no more."—44. Ξηρός. This epithet, with reference to ποιμᾶν, is to be rendered pale, sickly. Comp. xxiv. 60. As applied to βοτάναι, the meaning is obvious. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 57. "Aret ager; vitio moriens sitit aëris herba."

45. *Ενθ' οἷς. Meineke thinks this must be the singular put for the plural, because the final of the plural οἷς is long; but he prefers writing οἷς, since this form occurs in Idyl v. 99. Callimachus, Calath. Cer. 28. uses a singular exactly in the same manner: *Εν πίτυς, ἐν μεγάλαι πτελέαι ἔσων.—

48. Χω τὰς βῶς. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 100. "Heu, heu! quam pingui mæcer est mihi taurus in ervo! Idem amor exitium pecori est pecorisque magistro."

49. *Ω τράγε. "Vir gregis ipse caper." Virgil, Ecl. vii. 7. Constr. *Ω τράγε, ἄνερ τῶν λευκῶν αἰγῶν, ὧ σιμαὶ ἔριφοι, δεῦτ' ἐφ' ὕδωρ, οὗ βάθος ὕλης ἐστὶ μύριον. Some suppose this and the three following lines to be the composition of a grammarian.—*Ω βάθος ὕλας. Where the depth of the wood is immense, *Ω is Doric for οὗ, where, i. e. by the water. Reiske for ὧ reads ὡς, in the sense of "ad:" "Huc ades ad profunditatem sylvæ immensam." Palmerius and Wernsdorf read ὧ, to whom is; who has an immense thickness of beard, or shaggy hair. With this they compare Juvenal, ix. 13. "Horrida siccæ Sylva comæ;" and Maximianus Hetruscus, El. i. 140. speaking

Μυρίον, ὦ σιμαὶ δεῦτ' ἐφ' ὕδωρ ἔριφοι· 50
 Ἐν τήνῳ γὰρ τήνα· ἴθ' ὦ κόλε, καὶ λέγε κώρα,

Μή μοι γὰν Πέλοπος, μή μοι χρύσεια τάλαντα of the eye-brows: "Desuper incumbens hispida sylva premit." Binde-mann changes ὦ into the exclamation ὦ, and takes βάθος ὕλας μυρίον as a comic periphrasis for the goat itself. —

 50. Δεῦτε. The same as δεῦρο ἴτε. —
 51. Ἐν τήνῳ. For ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ τόπῳ,
 i. e. near the fountain. — ἴθ', ὦ κόλε.
Go, goat, and tell the damsel, &c. A gnat and a bee are sent on a similar errand by Meleager, Epigr. 90. and 108. Oxen, goats, and rams, without horns, were called κόλοι. Comp. Herodotus, iv. 29. Heinsius reads ὦ πόλε,
 i. e. ὦ αἰπόλε: Reiske, ὦ Κόλε, taking it as the name of a servant. — 52. Ὡς Πρωτεὺς. Virgil, Georg. iv. 395.
 "Cœruleus Proteus . . . Armenta et turpes pascit sub gurgite phocas." Comp.
 Homer, Odys. Δ. 386. Horace, Od. i. 2. 7. — "Menalcas and Daphnis have two contests. In the first they sing seven amœbean songs, consisting each of four verses. In the second they sing two songs; Menalcas one, consisting of eight verses, and Daphnis the other, consisting of nine.

 Menalcas is the first singer, as appears from vs. 30. The number of amœbean songs should be even, as is evident from vs. 61. One song consequently is wanted: which that one is, may be easily known. The song, ὦ τράγε, &c. belongs to Daphnis; not to Menalcas, as in the common copies: Δένδρεσι belongs to Menalcas, and Μή μοι γὰν, &c. to Daphnis. The song wanted then is that of Menalcas, to which Daphnis's song, ὦ τράγε, &c. answered. Could this song be recovered, the original would be perfect and complete; and the song of Menalcas, Δένδρεσι, &c. being placed before that of Daphnis, every thing would be right and regular." Edwards. Graefe supplies the defect thus:

ΜΕΝΑΛΚΑΣ.

ὦ τράγε, τῶν λευκῶν αἰγῶν ἄνερ, ὦ βάθος ὕλας
 Μυρίον, ὦ σιμαὶ δεῦτ' ἐφ' ὕδωρ ἔριφοι·
 Ἐν τήνῳ γὰρ τήνα. ἴτ', ὦ φίλαι, εἰπατε δ' αὐτᾷ, Ὡς Φοῖβος ποιμένας, καὶ θεὸς ὦν, ἔνεμεν.

ΔΑΨΝΙΣ.

Ταῦρε φίλ', ἀργεννῶν δαμαλῶν πόσις, ὦ βάθος ὕλας
 Μυρίον, ὦ λευκαὶ δεῦτ' ἐφ' ὕδωρ δαμάλαι·
 Ἐν τήνῳ γὰρ τήνα. ἴθ', ὦ κόλε, καὶ λέγε τήνα, Ὡς Πρωτεὺς φώκας, καὶ θεὸς ὦν, ἔνεμεν.

Eichstadt transposes the verses from vs. 41. to 56. thus: To Menalcas he gives vss. 45, 46. 43, 44.; to Daphnis
 vss. 41, 42. 47, 48.; then to Menalcas
 vss. 57, 58, 59, 60.; and to Daphnis
 vss. 49, 50, 51, 52.; and finally vss.
 53, 54, 55, 56. to Menalcas. After this he supposes a lacuna of four verses.

 Wernsdorf attributes the omission to the silence of Daphnis, who was unable to reply to vs. 57—60.

53. Γὰν Πέλοπος. Harles interprets this the Peloponnesus. Kiessling says, Pelops is put poetically for any king

The preposition ἐς has the signification here of πρὸς, or παρά: by the Sicilian sea. Comp. v. 123. Valckenaër conjectured Σικελικάν τ' ἐς ἄλλα, and Kiessling, τὰν Σικελάν τε ἄλλα.

57. Χειμῶν. A tempest. Virgil, Ecl. iii. 80. "Triste lupus stabulis, maturis frugibus imbres, Arboribus venti, nobis Amaryllidis iræ." — Ὑδασι δ' αὐχμὸς. Drought to the fountains. For ὕδασι, Valckenaër conjectured, and Reiske edited οὕδασι. — 58. Ὑσπλαγξ. The snare. It also signifies the sick in a trap, which, when touched, causes the latter to fall. Comp. 64. Ὅτι μικκὸς ἐὼν. "Quod parvus sim, et multas sequar." Edwards. See Viger, vi. § 1. 14. "Though low my lot, a numerous flock I keep." Fawkes. Comp. v. 66. xv. 42. — Πολλαῖσιν. Supply ἐρίφοις.

66. Οὐ χρὴ. The Scholiast thinks this verse imitated from Homer, Il. B. 24. 61. Οὐ χρὴ παννύχιον εἶδεν βουλήφορον ἄνδρα. Valckenaër pronounces vs. 65, 66. spurious. Without them, however, the regularity of the amoebean song is destroyed. — Σὺν παιδὶ νέμοντα. "Hah! Bright-tail! How, my dog! So fast asleep? Here trusting to a boy

— Ἐκρίθην ἄπο. Anastrophe for ἀπεκρίθην.

76. Ἀδὺ τὸ πνεῦμα. "Sweet is the breath of heifers." Polwhele. Kiessling translates πνεῦμα, "cantus fistulae." Warton thinks Milton had Theocritus in view when he wrote the passage: "Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet," &c. P. L. iv. 641. — 77. Ἀδὺ δὲ χῶ μόσχος. This verse should be expunged, it belongs to Idyl ix. 7. — 78. Τῷ θέρεος. I. e. διὰ τοῦ θέρεος, during the summer. Virgil, Ecl. i. 52. "Fortunate senex, hic inter flumina nota Et fontes sacros frigus captabis opacum." "These verses, 76, 77, 78. are not in the least connected with the preceding four; nor vs. 79, 80. with these three. These songs manifestly consist of little detached independent parts: and Daphnis passes from one subject to another, just as Menalcas speaks first to the wolf, then to the dog, and then to his sheep." Edwards.

"Ὡσπερ γὰρ τὰ φύλλα κόσμον τοῖς δένδρεσι φέρει, τὰ δὲ ἔρια τοῖς προβάτοις, ἡ δὲ χαίτη τοῖς ἵπποις, ἡ δὲ γενεὶα τοῖς ἀνδράσιν· οὕτω καὶ ἡ σιωπὴ κόσμον ταῖς γυναιξὶ φέρει.

82. Ἄδύ τι. Comp. i. 1. Virgil, Ecl. v. 45. "Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poëta," &c. — 83. Ἡ μέλι λείχεν. Comp. Septuagint, Cant. iv. 11.

84. Λάσδεο τὰς σύριγγας. Take these pipes, i. e. the pipe which had been won from Menalcas, together with his own pipe, which he had staked. The same construction occurs again, xv. 21., yet Valckenaër, Dahl, and Schæfer read τὰς σύριγγας, meaning the pipe which Menalcas had staked. Virgil, Ecl. vi. 69. "Hos tibi dant calamos, en! accipe, Musæ." Wernsdorf observes, that the presumption, vanity, and temerity of Menalcas, and the simplicity, candour, and modesty of Daphnis, were the circumstances which induced the umpire to decide in favour of the latter.

85. Αἱ δέ τι λῆς. If you will teach me too some such lay, &c. Comp. i. 12. iv. 14.

88. Ὡς μὲν ὁ παῖς. Ὡς, without an accent, is equivalent to "quemadmodum," as; but ὡς with an accent is the same as οὕτω, or. οὕτως, so. — 90. Ἀνετράπετο. Supply κατὰ before φρένα: Was downcast as to his mind with grief. — 91. Ὡτερος. Menalcas. Comp. vii. 37. — Γαμεθεῖσα. Betrothed. Some read ὡς καὶ νύμφα γαμηθεῖσ'. Hermann maintains that γαμηθεῖσα means asked in marriage, γαμεθεῖσα married. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 228. p. 387.

92. Κῆκ τούτῳ. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 70. "Ex illo Corydon Corydon est tempore nobis." — 93. Ἀκρηβος. Very young, not having yet arrived at maturity. Comp. vs. 3.

MET'Σ. THE SHEPHERD, or THE SMEN. Daphnis and Menalcas persuaded by a certain shepherd to his skill in bucolic song. They sing out one strain each, and each receives a prize. The shepherd presents Daphnis with a beautiful club of excellent shape, and Menalcas with a wreathed conch.
τὸ δ' ὠδᾶς ἄρχεο. Virgil, Ecl. i. 1. "Incipe, Mopse, prior." Ecl. i. 2. "Incipe, Damoetas, tu deinde incipe, Menalca." — 3. Ὑφέντες. This properly signifies to let under, suckling animal under its dam. Ecl. i. 4. In the next clause all MSS. have ὑπὸ στείραισι, i. e. under the she-goats. Ὑφίεναι, however, does not convey the meaning intended here, without a transposition of cases; as, ὑφίεναι στείρας ταύροις. Thus Longus, Past. iii. 21. Ὑποβάλλειν τὰς αἰγὰς τοῖς τράγοις. The Scholiast says ὑπὸ is put for ἐπὶ. Reiske, Warton, and Schæfer read ἐπὶ. — 4. Ἄμᾳ. Doric for ἅμα. Comp. x. 39. — Βόσκοιντο. Heinsius supplies εἶθε. — 5. Μηδὲν ἀτιμαγελεῦντες. Not at all wandering from the herd. Ἀτιμαγελεῖν, as its derivation shows, properly signifies to despise the herd. Comp. Aristot. Hist. Anim. vi. 18. ix. 3. — 6. Ἐμπροσθεν. A poetical form for ἔμπροσθεν. — Ἄλλοθε δ' αὖθις. Then in turn.

piled. Ἐν αὐτῇ δὲ τῇ κοίτῃ. Scholiast. See ἐν, præpositio sine casu, in Portus' Ionic Lexicon, and comp. Herod. i. 74.—10. Λευκᾶν ἐκ. The preposition here may be considered as pleonastic; and so the Scholiast took it: Δέρματα καλὰ δαμαλῶν λευκῶν. Comp. i. 140. Viger, ix. § 1. 16.—11. Κόμαρον. Comp. v. 129.—Ἐτίναξε. "Dejecit."

12. Τῷ δὲ Θέρευσ. Comp. vss. 19, 20.—13. Ἐρῶντε. "Puer et puella." Toup. Winterton reads ἐρῶν τι, making τι the object of ἀκούειν, i. e. something admonitory. Kiessling conjectured ἐρῶν γε.

14. Οὕτω Δάφνις. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 20. "Hos Corydon, illos referebat in ordine Thyrsis."

15. Αἴτνα μᾶτερ. Μᾶτερ here is a nominative. Menalcas calls Ætna his mother, because it was the place of his birth. Thus Ida is called μητέρα Θηρῶν in Homer, Il. Θ. 47.—16. Κοίλαις ἐν πέτραισιν. Polyphemus gives a similar description of his cave in Ovid, Met. xiii. 810. "Sunt mihi pars montis vivo pendentia saxo Antra."—18. Ὡν μοι πρὸς κεφαλᾷ. Imitated from Euripides, Cycl. vs. 328. "Ὅταν δὲ βορέας χιόνα Θρηϊκίος χέῃ, Δοραῖσι θηρῶν σῶμα περιβαλὼν ἐμὸν, Καὶ πῦρ ἀνέθων, χιόνος οὐδέν μοι μέλει.—19. Ἐν πυρὶ δέ. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 49. Supply εἶσιν. The Latin translations explain χορία by "exta," entrails. Comp. x. 11. According to Hesychius it signifies a preparation of milk and honey.—20. Χειμαίνοντος. When the storm rages. See Duker on Thuc. viii. 6. and Matth. Gr. Gr. § 563. Grammarians usually supply χρόνου. See Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 549.—Οὐδ' ὅσον. This is equivalent to the Latin "ne tantillum quidem:" And I have as little care for winter as a toothless man, &c. The Scholiast says: Οὐκ ἔχω δὲ μικρὰν φροντίδα χειμῶνος, ὥσπερ οὐδὲ νωδὸς ἀνὴρ καρύων, &c. For ἢ, Toup conjectured ἦν, Casaubon and others ἦ, "quemadmodum."—21. Ἀμύλοιο. Ἀμυλος was a soft cake made of flour, not prepared by a mill, but by pounding. Some suppose it to be boiled wheat.

23. Κορύναν. Comp. vii. 19. 43. —

24. Αὐτοφυᾶ. That is, shaped by nature, as being an entire plant. Warton and Harles extol with much praise the elegant simplicity in the description of these gifts. — 25. Στρόμβω. Στρόμβος properly signifies any body twisted round, or turned round, as a top; here it signifies a conch, such as was formerly used as a trumpet: the “Murex Tritonis” of Linnæus. — 26. Πέτραισιν ἐν Ἰκαρίαισι. On the Icarian rocks, i. e. on the rocky shore of the island Icaria, now Nicaria, one of the Sporades in the Ægean sea. The Scholiast says: ἐν ταῖς πέτραις τοῦ Ἰκαρίου πελάγους. — Δοκεύσας. Δοκεύειν signifies to lie in wait for; here to surprise, take by surprise. — 27. Πέντε ταμῶν. I. e. εἰς πέντε μέρη ταμῶν ἀνθρώποις πέντε οὖσιν. See Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 683. — Ὁ δέ. Menalcas. He was so delighted with the gift, that he immediately sounded it, as he would a trumpet. The author's meaning is misrepresented by Fawkes.

28. Βωκολικαὶ Μῶσαι. All hail, hcolic Muses! An usual mode of invocation. Virgil, Ecl. vii. 21. “Nymphæ, noster amor, Libethrides, aut mihi carmen, Quale meo Codro, concedite.” Comp. Callimachus, H. Cer. vs. 135. “The shepherd having praised and rewarded Daphnis and Menalcas for their singing, was desirous of letting them hear how he could sing himself: he therefore requests the Muses to bring to his memory the song he chanted to the four shepherds, who partook of the fish with him. This song begins at vs. 31. and ends with the Idyl.” Edwards. Some give the remainder of the Idyl to Menalcas. — 29. Τάν ποκ' ἐγώ. Comp. i. 24. ii. 45. Meineke would prefer τὰν τόκ' ἐγώ.

30. Μηκέτι. Never, as in Pindar, Olymp. i. 7. This verse is supposed not to belong to this place. It alludes to a superstitious opinion of the ancients, that a falsehood was sometimes followed by some such punishment, as a blister on the tip of the tongue, or a pimple on the nose, &c. Vossius, who, for φύσης, reads φύση, sc. ἡ φῶδῃ, interprets it thus: Lest hereafter the song, as being badly repeated, should produce a pustule on the tip of my tongue. He adds, that superstition assigned this punishment for an unskilful recitation of verses.

31. Τέττιξ μὲν τέττιγι. Thus Gregory Nazianzen: Πῶλοι μὲν πάλοισι φίλοι, ἔλαφοί τ' ἐλάφοισι, Καὶ ψῆρες ψήρεσσιν, ἄγνῳ δέ τε τίμιος ἄγνός.

Ἰρηκες δ' Ἰρηξιν· ἐμὴν δ' ἅ Μῶσα καὶ ὠδᾶ.
 Τᾷς μοι πᾶς εἴη πλεῖος δόμος· οὔτε γὰρ ὕπνος,
 Οὔτ' ἔαρ ἐξαπίνας γλυκερώτερον, οὔτε μελίσσαις
 Ἀνθεα, ὅσπον ἐμὴν Μῶσαι φίλαι· οὐς γὰρ ὀρεῦντι 35
 Γαθεῦσαι, τῶς δ' οὔτι ποτῶ δαλήσατο Κίρκα.

Comp. Juvenal, xv. 159. — 32. Ἐμὴν δ' ἅ Μῶσα. Comp. Virgil, Georg. ii. 475.

33. Τᾷς μοι πᾶς. “ Quo carmine mihi tota sit plena domus.” Portus. “ Hac (Musa) mihi,” &c. Kiessling. Τᾶν in place of τᾷς would have obviated the ambiguity. — Οὔτε γὰρ ὕπνος.

Virgil, Ecl. v. 46. “ Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poëta, Quale sopor fessis in gramine, quale per æstum Dulcis aquæ saliente sitim restinguere rivo.” Thus also Pope, Past. iii. 43. “ Not bubbling fountains,” &c. — 36. Δαλήσατο. Δηλεῖσθαι sometimes signifies to injure by philters. Comp. xv. 48.

ΜΙΛΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΒΑΤΤΟΣ.

Ἐργατίνα βουκαῖε, τί νῦν, ὦ ἕρρε, πεπόνθης ;
Οὔτε τὸν ὄγμον ἄγειν ὀρθὸν δύνα, ὡς τοπρὶν ἄγες.

ἜΡΓΑΤΙΝΑΙ. THE LABOURERS, OR THE REAPERS. This Idyl commences with a dialogue between two reapers, Milo and Battus. The latter is so captivated with the love of a music-girl, named Bombyce, that he is unable to perform his work as he ought, and to keep pace with his fellow labourers. Being interrogated by Milo, he declares his love, and sings the praises of his mistress. Milo compliments him, in a jeering manner, on his singing, and in his turn repeats the Song of Lytierses.

1. Ἐργατίνα βουκαῖε. Rustic labourer. Βουκαῖος is properly applied to one who follows a yoke of oxen ; one who ploughs with oxen : hence a rustic in general.—Τί νῦν. What now has happened to you, O unhappy man? Comp. Viger, v. § 9. 11. seqq. ὦ ἕρρε is Doric for ὦ οἰζυρέ. Comp. Aristoph. Nub. 645. Vesp. 1502. Πεπόνθης, Doric for πεπόνθεις, and this for ἐπεπόνθεις. Comp. vii. 88. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 198. 4. and Koen on Gregorius Cor. p. 81.—2. Οὔτε τὸν ὄγμον. Neither art thou able to proceed in a straight line, &c. Thus the Scholiast : Οὔτε τὴν εὐθείαν τάξιν, ὡς πρότερον, διατήρεις. Ὀγμος properly signifies a furrow made in ploughing: hence a line ; a row of mowers ; the straight space which is cut in mowing ; also the swath cut. In Homer, Il. A. 67. we have : Οἱ δ', ὥστ' ἀμητῆρες ἐναντίοι ἀλλήλοισιν Ὀγμον ἐλαύνωσιν, κ. τ. λ. On which Heyne writes : “Ὀγμος est ordo metentium frugem, inde et series frugis seu demetendæ, seu demessæ in agro jacentis. Comp. Σ. 546. 557. nostris hominibus das Schwad. Ὀγμον ἐλαύνειν, ut apud Theocritum, x. 2. ὄγμον ἄγειν ὀρθόν, erit accipiendum de ipso opere faciendo, seu de ordine stipularum, quem metendo ac secando pererrat messor : ἐλαύνει adeo, ἄγει, ducit, facit, seriem stipularum recisarum. Eodem modo quo sulcum arator facit, ducit, ἐλαύνει : ut Pindar, P. iv. 405. ὀρθὰς δ' αἰλακάς ἐντανύσαις ἤλαυνε : sic Latini ducere sulcum, pro facere.” More modern editors generally follow in the same track. But Dr. Kennedy, late Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, in his excellent edition of Homer, observes : “Heyne cites Pindar in favour of that which he prefers. I do not think, however, that the passage he cites bears him out in his interpretation, and should prefer the construction, ἐναντίοι ἀλλήλοισιν ἐλαύνωσι κατὰ τὸν ὄγμον : ply their task in Berndt in his Lexicon Homericum says: "Messores linea recta metendo procedunt, viam ducunt metendo; nam ἐλαύνειν ὄγμον, et ἄγειν ὄγμον, pro ὀγμεύειν, sulcum ducere, proficisci linea recta; ad analogiam ἐλαύνειν τάφρον significat viam ducere rectam, ut arator aratro sulcum ducere dicitur." The hippopotamus, which feeds walking backwards, is said by Nicander, Ther. 570. ὄγμον ἐλαύνειν παλίσσυντον; and Oriban, speaking of cranes travelling, says, Hal. A. 625. ἄλλυτον ὄγμον ἄγουσιν. Comp. Sturz's Lexicon Xenoph. v. ὀγμεύειν. Ὀγμος is incorrectly accented on the last syllable in some dictionaries. — Δύνα. Doric for δύνασαι. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 230. p. 394.

3. Οὐδ' ἄμα. Neither do you reap the corn in an equal pace with your fellow labourers. Comp. vs. 21. —

4. Ὡσπερ οἷς. Virgil, Georg. iii. 465. speaking of an unhealthy sheep, says: "Videris aut summas carpentem ignavius herbas, Extremamque sequi," &c. — Κάκτος. The cactus, or prickly pear. Some translate it a thistle; others an artichoke. Comp. Theophrast. H. P. vi. 4. Athenæus, i. 28.

5. Ποῖός τις δείλαν. How will you be in the evening, or even in the afternoon? Portus constitutes an hysteron-proteron here. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 425. 2. α. Δείλη, by itself, signifies twilight, either in the morning or in the evening. Comp. Viger, iii. § 4. 5. Τὸ is Doric for σὺ, which escaped Schæfer on Sophocles, Trach. p. 332. — Ἄματος. Comp. ii. 86. — 6. Ἀρχόμενος. Harles would supply τοῦ ἔργου, or τοῦ λαιοτομεῖν, or repeat τᾷς αὐλακος. Kiessling prefers the first. — Τᾷς αὐλακος. Literally: Do not devour the ridge, i. e. makest no progress in mowing down the swath.

Μηδέ γε συμβαίη. No: and it never happen.—Χαλεπὸν. It is dangerous to make a dog taste a skin. A proverb, to which Horace alludes, Sat. i. 5. 83. "Ut canis a corio nunquam absterrebitur uncto." Lucian mentions it in his tract to an Illi-Bibliomaniac, c. 25. Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀπαξ παύσαιτο ἂν σκυτοτραγεῖν σα. Comp. Erasmus, Adag. ii. 1. 1. Χορίον, or χόριον, signifies the animal membrane which wraps the foetus in the womb; hence a skin, leather.

The passages from Lucian and Horace seem to favour this meaning. Some translate it "exta," or "entrails."

ἔραμαι. Comp. i. 78. ii. 149. Ἐκ πίθῳ. A proverb. The meaning is: You doubtless are wealthy and live upon luxuries; but I am poor, and must not even dream of being so. For δῆλον, which is taken here ironically, Brunck reads from conjecture πηλὸν, wine; and for ὄξος he gives ὄξους: but Reiske shows that a nominative, or an accusative, may be joined with ἄλις. The English idiom is similar: I have scarcely vinegar enough. Comp. Apoll. Rhod. ii. 424. Callimachus, H. Jov. vs. 84.

14. Τοιγάρτοι. A proverb, meaning that every thing was neglected: Therefore all before my doors is unweeded since sowing time. Somewhat similar is this of Virgil, Ecl. ii. 70. "Semi-putata tibi frondosa vitis in ulmo est." The commentators understanding this verse of Theocritus literally, and not being able to reconcile the ten days' passion of Battus with the length of time from sowing to harvest, propose reading σποδῶ for σπόρῳ. Polwhele translates it: "Ah! hence it is my fallows are unsown."

17. Εὔρε θεὸς τὸν ἀλιτρόν. Two proverbs, suitable to the particular case of Battus. They are humorously said to ridicule Battus for falling in love with an old maid. The Gods have caused you to be fascinated by an old maid, to punish you for your sins: and, having attained what you ardently desired, you must make the best of it. "The vulgar personages of Theocritus are full of adages. It is remarkable, that the common people, in general, manage the proverbs of their country with great adroitness." Polywhele.

ΚΥΚΛΩΨ. THE CYCLOPS. In this Idyl, which is addressed to Nicias, a learned physician of Miletus, the poet endeavours to show that poetry is the only remedy for love. To illustrate this he instances the case of Polyphemus, who loved to distraction the sea-nymph Galatea. The monster is represented as sitting on a lofty rock, overlooking the ocean, and soothing his sorrows with poetry and music. In a former Idyl, Damoetas represents the character of the Cyclops; in this Polyphemus is introduced in his own person: in that Galatea is a wanton, and Polyphemus obdurate; in this the nymph grows shy, and slights her lover, who almost loses his reason in despair. The charms of poetry, however, restore him to his senses; and we cannot but feel the sweetness of his song, which is not only musical but elegant. This is the last of those poems of Theocritus which the critics will allow to be genuine pastorals.

1. Οὐδὲν ποττὺν ἔρωτα. Ovid, Met. i. 523. "Hei mihi, quod nullis amor est medicabilis herbis!" — Ποττὺν. Comp. v. 74. — Πεφύκει. From the perfect of φύω is formed this new verb πεφύκω. This remedy, somewhat gentle and sweet, is in the power of mankind; but it is not easy to find it. It is in the power of men, says Kiessling, as being a gift from heaven; but being granted to a very few, it is difficult to be found. — 4. Εὐρῆν. Doric for εὐρεῖν. Comp. xv. 24. xxiv. 80. Matth. Gr. other form of πιαρὸς, whatever Schneider and Buttman may say to the contrary. See the Lexilogus, p. 518. ed. Fishl.

22. Φοιτῆς δ' αὖθ' οὕτως. You are in the habit of coming hither thus unceremoniously. So Kiessling: so, ohne Umstände. Φοιτῆς is Doric for φοιτᾶς. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 10. § 49. obs. 2. § 200. 2. This verb implies a frequency, like the Latin "venito;" and is often said of those who frequent a school. Αὖθι is a poetical word for δεῦρο. Commentators in general think the reading corrupt, and various attempts have been made to correct it. Luzac proposes ὦδ' αὐτως, hither in vain; Graese αὐθαδέως, or αὐτομάτως. An anonymous critic in a Jena periodical conjectured εἰθ' οὕτως, referring to Hermann on Viger, p. 933. Wasenberg, transposing some words in this and the following verse, reads: Φοιτῆς δ' εὐθὺς ἰοῖσα, ὅκκα γλυκὺς ὕπνος ἔχῃ με, Οἶχῃ δ' αὖθ' οὕτως, ὅκκα, &c. Ὀκκα is for ὅτε κε, i. e. ἄν.

28. Παύσασθαι δ' ἐσιδὼν. Constr. Ἐσιδὼν δέ σε οὐκ ἐδυνάμην καὶ ὕστερον ἐξ ἐκείνου χρόνου, οὐδέ τι πω νῦν δύναμαι παύσασθαι. The Scholiast constructs it thus: Οὐ δύναμαι παύσασθαι ἐξ ἐκείνου τοῦ καιροῦ, καθ' ὃν εἶδόν σε ὅτε μετὰ τοῦτο, ὅτε μέχρι τοῦ νῦν.—29. Οὐ μὰ. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 609. p. 1081.

31. Οὖνεκα μοι. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 32. "Dum despicias omnes, Dumque tibi est odio mea fistula, dumque capellæ, Hirsutumque supercilium proluxaque barba." Many critics observe that Virgil's judgment had forsaken him here, when he transferred to his little Italian shepherd the shaggy eyebrow and lengthy beard of Polyphemus.—

32. Ποτὶ θῶτερον ὥς. For πρὸς τὸ ἕτερον ὁδὸς.—33. Εἷς δ' ὀφθαλμός. Ovid, Met. xiii. 851. "Unum est in medio lumen mihi fronte, sed instar Ingentis clypei."

Many call ἀμνοφόρως, pregnant, which Caes. justly condemns. Reiske conjectured μανοφέρως, i. e. μνηοφόρους, loaded with white, like moons, which reading the quotation from Virgil seems to favour. A calf similarly marked is mentioned by Horace, Od. iv. 2. 57.

ΣΥΡΑΚΟΥΣΙΑΙ. THE SYRACUSIAN GOSSIPS, OF WOMEN ATTENDING THE FESTIVAL OF ADONIS. Two trifling, talkative, Syracusan women, of the lower order, Praxinoë and her friend Gorgo, who, with their husbands, had fixed their abode at Alexandria, go as spectators to the Festival of Adonis, which was celebrated, with great splendour, under the auspices of Arsinoë, the widowed queen of Ptolemy Philadelphus. Their conversation sets forth, in a humorous manner, their domestic concerns and habits, and ludicrously exposes the vanity and fashion of the times. Towards the end of the Idyl, a music-girl is introduced, chanting a song in honor of Adonis, in which the praises of Berenice and Arsinoë are not forgotten. — Reiske observes, that with regard to sweetness and pleasantry, few of the Idyls can be compared with the Syracusan Gossips. Polwhele converts it into a Drama of three Acts, the second beginning at vs. 44. and the third at vs. 78.

1. Ἐνδοῖ Πραξινοά; Terence, Andr. v. 2. 10. "Anne est intus Pamphilus?" — Ὡς χρόνῳ. Supply πάρει. "O quam diuturna ex absentia ades." Reiske. See Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 402. Eurip. Phoeniss. vss. 302. 313. — 2. Ὅρη δίφρον. This is addressed to a servant: See for a chair, Eunoë. The present imperative of verbs in ᾰω contracts, in the Doric, ae into η, instead of α. Comp. vii. 50. Aristoph. Ach. 800. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 201. 7.

3. Ἔχει κάλλιστα. Thank you. A formula of returning thanks, when a proffered kindness is declined with civility. They also said simply κάλλιστα, or ἐπαινῶ. The Latins usually said "recte;" sometimes "benigne." Comp. Aristoph. Ran. 511. Horace, Epist. i. 7. 16. Viger, v. § 7. 9. and my note on Terence, Andr. ii. 3. 51.

The pronoun here is elegantly pleonastic, as in Lucian's second Marine Dialogue: Καὶ ἀπ' ἐκείνου τυφλὸς εἰμί σοι, ὦ Πρόσειδον. — 5. Πολλῶ μὲν ὄχλῳ. Supply ὄντος.

6. Παντᾶ κρηπῖδες. Comp. viii. 41. Scholiast: Πανταχοῦ κεκρηπιδωμένοι ἄνδρες. λέγει δὲ τοὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει στρατιώτας. "Men in arms." Faakes. Comp. Juvenal, iii. 248. xvi. 24. In the latter passage "tot caligæ, tot milia clavorum," are put for so many soldiers. Add Schæfer on Longus, p. 373. — 7. Ἄτρυτος. Fatiguing. This word properly signifies indefatigable. See Hemsterhuis on Lucian, tom.

i. p. 179. — Τὸ δ' ἐκαστέρῳ. Thus Herodotus, vi. 108. ἡμεῖς ἐκαστέρῳ οἰκόμεν, where Matth. Gr. Gr. § 457. supplies ἢ ὥστε ἡμᾶς δέχεσθαι.

8. Ταῦτα. For διὰ ταῦτα. — Ὁ πάραρος τήνος. This crazy husband of mine. Πάραρος is derived from ἄρω, and is equivalent to the Latin "ineptus." Comp. Eustath. on Homer, Il. Ψ. p. 1319. Kiessling says it is put for παρήγορος, and derives it from αἶρω. The latter word is thus explained by Dionys. Halic. A. R. vii. 73. Σειραῖος ἵππος, ὃν ἀπὸ τοῦ παρηγορῆσθαι καὶ συνεξεύχθαι παρήγορον ἐκάλεον οἱ παλαιοί. Comp. Homer, Il. Θ. 87. Il. 152. 474. Hence it is said of a person, whose mind wanders from the path of right reason. — Ἐπ' ἔσχατα γᾶς. The voyage from Sicily to Alexandria seemed, to the unlettered gossip, to have brought her to the world's end. "Huc mecum in extremum orbis terrarum cum venisset, hanc iste fatuus emit (vel conduxit) ædiculam, a tuis adeo ædibus remotam, ut ne nos essemus vicina, ὅπως μὴ γείταρες ᾖμεν." Vulcken. Reiske and Toup think these words signify at the remotest part of the city. — Ἐλαβε. Took, hired. According to others, purchased. Valckenaër suspects that λαβεῖν was frequently used in this meaning in common conversation. — 9. Ἰλεὸν. Martial, ix. 19.

“Donasti, Lupe, rus sub urbe nobis;
In quo nec cucumis jacere rectus,
Nec serpens latitare torta possit.”

Comp. Juvenal, iii. 231. — 10. Ποτ' ἔριν. Through opposition, the envious pest!

12. Τῷ μικκῷ. Comp. vs. 42. v. 66. Juvenal, xv. 44.

13. Οὐ λέγω ἀπφύν. I do not mean papa. Reiske thinks ἀπφύν is derived from the Hebrew abba. “Quidni potius ex ipsa natura!” Kiessling. For the accentuation of this word see Schæfer on Gregorius Cor. p. 320.

14. Ναὶ τὰν πότνιαν. By the venerable Proserpine! Women, and particularly those of Sicily, were accustomed to swear by Proserpine and Ceres.

15. Ἀπφὺς μὰν τῆνος. That other papa, of whom I was speaking. She uses this language to deceive the child. — Λέγομες δὲ πρῶαν. Toup supplies κατὰ and translates: “We use the word πρῶαν upon all occasions.” So also the French translator, De Longe-pierre: L'autre jour; car chez moi l'autre jour tout se nomme. Which interpretation Kiessling thinks the only true one. “This fellow then, — we may disguise it you know, And talk of the thing, as if some time ago — This block, &c. Polwhele. Reiske interprets the passage thus: “Let us, before we go out, relate to each other all our grievances.” — 16. Νίτρον. Nitre. Properly a mineral alkaline substance, a carbonate of soda; sometimes also the alkaline salt procured from wood ashes, potass; used in washing. In the detail which Pollux has given us, vii. 95. of the various apparatus that ministered to the ornament of the Grecian women, we meet with νίτρον, and paints of various colours. Comp. Harles on Ovid Trist. i. 1. 6. — Φῦκος. Rouge; properly the root of the plant alkanet (Anchusa officinalis), from which rouge was extracted. — 17. Ἦνθε φέρων. He brought with him, &c. Comp. Viger, vii. § 2. Rubiken understands this of a poor, frugal husband, who would not purchase what his wife required, but brought salt, tacitly admonishing her, that necessaries were to be bought, and not vanities.

18. Χαίμους ταῦτά γε. And my husband is at least in the same way as yours, i. e. is as great a fool. Comp. Viger, v. § 7. 15. seqq. — Φθόρος ἀργυρίῳ. The ruin of his money. — 19. Ἑπταδράχμῳ. Constr. Ἐχθές ἔλαβε πέντε πόκους ἑπταδράχμους, κυνάδας, &c. Yesterday he purchased five fleeces for seven drachms each, mere dogs' hair, the pluckings of old maimed crones — all trash, toil and trouble. See Bentley's Dissertation upon Phalaris, p. 444. Modern editions generally have ἑπτὰ δραχμῶν, which depends on ἀντὶ understood. A drachma was a silver coin worth seven pence three farthings of our money. — 20. Ἄπαν ῥύπον. Ἄπαν is often joined with words of a different gender. Comp. iii. 18. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 437. obs. 3.

21. Τῷμπέχονον. Ἀμπέχονον was a cloak, or upper garment, of fine texture, worn chiefly by women; sometimes, however, by effeminate men.

Comp. Xenophon, Mem. i. 2. 5. where the form ἀμπεχόνη is used. — Περονατρίδα. Your clasped robe. Περονητρίς was an under garment worn by women. It consisted of two pieces, one before and the other behind, open at the sides, and fastened over the shoulders with clasps. Hence it was called also σχιστὸς χιτῶν, and διπλοῦν ἱμάτιον. Comp. Herod. v. 87, 88. — Λαζεῦ. Comp. viii. 84.

22. Βᾶμες. Doric for βῶμεν: Let us go, &c. Some MSS. have βῶμες. — 23. Θασόμεναι. I. e. to be spectators of the ceremony in honor of Adonis. — 24. Κοσμῆν. Comp. xi. 4. xxiv. 80. — Ἐν ὀλβίῳ. This genitive depends upon the dative οἴκῳ understood. These words are usually given to Praxinoë.

25. Ὡν ἴδες. What therefore you saw, you, having seen, may tell to one who has not seen. So this verse is generally found in the MSS. and in Gregorius Cor. p. 322. Comp. v. 69. For various other readings see Kiesel's note. — Ἰδόντι. This must be taken in a general sense. As applied to Praxinoë it should be feminine.

26. Ἐρπειν ὦρα. It were time to be

ΠΡΑΞΙΝΟ΄Η.

Εὐνόα, αἶρε τὸ νᾶμα, καὶ ἐς μέσον, αἰνόθρυπτε,
 Θὲς πάλιν· αἱ γαλέαι μαλακῶς χρήσδοντι καθεύδεν·
 Κινεῦ δὴ, φέρε θᾶσσον ὕδωρ· ὕδατος πρότερον δεῖ.
 "Αδ' ὡς νᾶμα φέρει· δὸς ὅμως· μὴ πουλὺ, ἅπληστε, 30
 *Εγχει ὕδωρ· δύστανε, τί μευ τὸ χιτῶνιον ἄρδεις; Παῦσαι. ὑποῖα θεοῖς ἐδόκει, τοιαῦτα νένιμμαι.

going. Comp. i. 106. — 'Αεργοῖς. A proverbial expression, which is thus expressed in Erasmus: "Ignavis semper feriæ sunt." The meaning intended here seems to be: The idle always can find time enough for small talk. "The feast now calls us hence away, And we shall oft keep holiday." Fawkes.

27. Εὐνόα, αἶρε τὸ νᾶμα. Eunoë, bring that robe, and, lazy jade, place it again before me. These cats love to sleep softly! Αἶρειν and φέρειν are synonymous in ancient Greek authors. Νᾶμα is Doric for νῆμα, which properly signifies thread; hence a woof, or warp; a weft; a garment. Comp. vs. 34. Homer, Odys. Δ. 134. It might also be rendered a napkin here: "tonsis mantilia villis," as in Virgil, Æn. i. 702. See Schneider on the Authors de R. R. vii. 370. It is generally translated water in this passage. — Αἰνόθρυπτε. Literally, exceedingly enervated: hence delicate, lazy. The words αἱ γαλέαι, &c. are supposed to be an ancient proverb, which Praxinoë sarcastically applies to her maid, to reprove her seeming laziness. Toup, who understands them in this manner, translates them: "The cats like fish, but are afraid to wet their feet!" Koen on Gregorius Cor. p. 323. interprets νᾶμα, "stamen," yarn, and supposes Eunoë is desired to remove the yarn, which she had carelessly laid down, and to put it where the cats might not spoil it. Kiessling puts a colon after θὲς, and interprets the sentence thus: "Tolle mantele, mihique appone (θὲς ἐς μέσον, place it near at hand), ut in promptu habeam: rursus feles," &c.—28. Αἱ γαλέαι. Γαλήη properly signifies a weasel. It is sometimes used for a cat. See Perizonius on Ælian, V. H. xiv. 4. The verb χρήζειν, when followed by an infinitive, has the sense of the Latin "velle," "desiderare." Comp. Euripides, Phœn. 303. 477.

29. Κινεῦ δὴ. Come, bestir yourself. "Move vero ocyus te." Terence, Eun. v. 3. 3. "An exquisite painting of a female fluttering with various feelings amidst her preparations for a public place, where she is going rather to be seen than to see—more than usually anxious about ornamenting her person—full of conceited airs and affected delicacy—chiding her maid without knowing why—and, in violent haste, exhibiting all the marks of levity, caprice, and arrogance." Warton.

30. "Αδ' ὡς νᾶμα φέρει. See, how she brings the robe! i. e. when she ought to have brought the water first. Reiske and Kiessling say, "how awkwardly!" "Αδε is Doric for ἰδοῦ. Comp. iv. 54.—Μὴ πουλὺ. Don't pour in too much. Eunoë now terrified by the ill humour of her mistress, ceases to pour the water, whereupon the latter says sharply ἔγχει ὕδωρ.

32. Ὅποῖα θεοῖς ἐδόκει. I am as well washed as seemed fit to the Gods. Valckenaër explains it thus: Praxinoë not having been sufficiently washed to her mind, acquiesces with pious resignation in the will of the Gods, in this matter, as in all things else. Kiessling

33. Πᾶ. Comp. i. 66. ii. 1. — ὦδε φέρ' αὐτάν. Comp. v. 44.

34. Μάλα τοι. This clasped garment of many folds exceedingly becomes you. — ἔμπερόναμα. The same as περονη-τρὶς in verse 21. — 35. Πόσσω κατέβα. For how much did it come down to you from the loom, i. e. how much did it cost you when finished in the loom? Comp. xviii. 33. The Scholiast says, "How much did it cost you when cut off from the piece?"

36. Μὴ μνάσης. Pray don't remind me of it. It cost me more than two minæ of pure silver; and I even risked my life in the work, i. e. I worked so hard in weaving it, that I endangered my life. For the pleonastic particle ἢ after comparatives, see Koen and Schæfer on Gregorius Cor. p. 89. Weiske de Pleon. p. 181. and Matth. Gr. Gr. § 450. obs. 2. Comp. xx. 27. The ancient mina consisted of seventy-five drachmæ: it was increased to one hundred by Solon. Comp. vs. 21.

38. Ναί· καλὸν εἶπας. In truth, it is beautiful, as you said. Reiske says, "verum ais," taking καλὸν εἶπας as said for καλῶς εἶπας. So also the Scholiast: τοῦτο ἀληθὲς εἶπας. In place of ναί· καλὸν εἶπας, Eldick conjectured πᾶ ποκ' ἔλειπες Τῶμπέχονον; φέρε μοι, &c. as being all addressed to the maid. Some editors have adopted this reading.

40. Μορμῶ. A word of terror, used to frighten children. It also signifies a phantom, a hideous imaginary female, the terror of the nursery. The Scholiast explains it: ἡ μορμῶ ἵππος δάκνει, the hobgoblin horse bites!

42. Τὸν μικκόν. Take the little fellow and play with him. Comp. v. 66.

44. *Ω θεοί. "Dii boni, quid turbæ 'st!" Terence, Heaut. ii. 3. 13. Praxinoë and Gorgo, attended by their maids, now enter the public streets. — 45. Χρὴ. In the signification of the Latin "licet." Δεῖ also is used in the same way. See Duker on Thuc. ii. 51. — Μύρμακες. Virgil, Æn. iv. 401. "Ac velui ingentem formicæ," &c.

47. *Εξ ὧ ἐν ἀθανάτοις. Ptolemy Philadelphus enrolled his father, Ptolemy Soter, and his mother, Berenice, among the number of the gods. — 48. Toup joins ἐξ ἀπάτας ἔπαισδον, "dolo malo luserunt." — 50. *Αλλάλοις ὁμαλοί. On a par with each other in knavish tricks, all hullies. The word ἐρειοί is found only in this passage, and is supposed to be corrupt. Toup conjectured πάντες ἄεργοί : which he translates, "a parcel of idle rascals." Various other conjectures may be seen in Kiessling's edition.

53. *Ορθὸς ἀνέστα. Virgil, Æn. x. 892. "Tollit sese arrectum quadrupes." Πυρρὺς means the colour, which the ancient Romans called "burrus," sorrel. — Κυνοθαρσῆς. Rash, impudent Eunoe ! For the nominative usurping the place of the vocative, see Fischer on Weller, iii. p. 319. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 312. — 54. Διαχρησεῖται. He will destroy his leader. Comp. Herod. i. 24. Τὸν ἄγοντα properly signifies the person who leads a horse ; yet the Scholiast explains it τὸν ἀναβάτην, the rider.

all the Pagan world. Aristophanes reckons the feast of Adonis among the chief festivals of the Athenians. The Syrians observed it with all the violence of grief. It was celebrated at Alexandria in Saint Cyril's time; and when Julian the Apostate made his entry at Antioch, in the year 362, they were celebrating the feast of Adonis. The ancients differ greatly in their accounts of this divinity. Athenæus says he was the favourite of Bacchus. Plutarch maintains that he and Bacchus are the same; and that the Jews abstained from swine's flesh, because Adonis was killed by a boar. Ausonius, Epigr. xxx. affirms that Bacchus, Osiris, and Adonis, are one and the same.—98. Ἄτις καὶ Σπέρχιν. Who also gained the prize in singing the dirge called Sperchis. Comp. She is called golden by the poets in general. “Auro ludens,” say the Latin translators. The Scholiast says: Διὰ τούτου δηλοῖ, ὅτι οἱ ἐρωῶντες χρυσῷ πείθουσι τοὺς ἐρωμένους. “At potius est χρυσῷ χαίρουσα, s. ‘auro ornata.’” Kiessling. Scaliger conjectured χρυσοπίζουσαν Ἀφροδίτα.

102. Οἶόν τοι. How beautiful an Adonis have the soft-footed Hours brought to thee, &c. “The superstitious mystery of lamenting for Adonis may be thus explained: Adonis was the Sun. The upper hemisphere of the earth was anciently called Venus: the under Proserpine. When the Sun, therefore, was in the six inferior signs, they said it was with Proserpine; when in the six superior, with Venus. By the boar that slew Adonis, they understood Winter—not unaptly represented by so gloomy an animal. On another view of the matter, we may suppose that they meant by Adonis the Fruits of the Earth; which are for one while buried, but at length appear flourishing to the sight. When, therefore, the seed was thrown into the ground, they said Adonis was gone to Proserpine; but when it sprouted up, they said he had revisited the light and Venus. Hence, probably, it was, that they sowed corn and made gardens for Adonis.” Universal Hist. vol. ii.

112. Πὰρ μὲν οἱ. Comp. Catullus, lxiv. 281. At the feast of Adonis were carried shells filled with earth, in which grew several sorts of herbs, especially lettuces, in remembrance that Adonis was laid out by Venus on a bed of lettuces. These were called κῆποι; whence Ἀδωνίδος κῆποι are proverbially applied to things unfruitful or fading; because these herbs were only sown so long before the festival, as to sprout forth and be green at that time. They were afterwards cast into the water.—Δρυὸς ἄκρα. Periphrasis for trees. Kiessling translates it "arborum rami." Δρῦς properly signifies an oak-tree. It is often used for tall, strong fruit-trees.—114. Χρῦσει' ἀλάδαστρα. Golden vases of Syrian ointment. These vases were so named from the stone of which they were usually made. See Schneider's Lex. 124. Οἰνοχόον. Ganymede. "We cannot easily determine, whether these figures were in tapestry, painting, or sculpture. The critics have very confused and discordant ideas on the subject. There is every reason to think that some of them were solid figures, and there is no doubt but tapestry was the most conspicuous and ornamental part of the scene." Warton. — This passage seems to have given Virgil the hint for his most beautiful piece of tapestry, Æn. v. 252. "Intextusque puer frondosa regius Ida Veloces jaculo cervos cursuque fatigat Acer, anhelanti similis, quem præpes ab Ida Sublimem pedibus rapuit Jovis armiger uncis. Longævi palmas nequicquam ad sidera tendunt Custodes; sævitque canum latratus in auras." "This description," says Warton, "is extremely picturesque: the circumstances of the boy's panting, the old men lifting up their hands, and, above all, the dogs looking up and barking after him, are painted in the liveliest manner imaginable." Comp. Spencer, F. Q. iii. 11.

ἙΛΕΝΗΣ ἘΠΙΘΑΛΛΑΪΜΙΟΣ. THE EPITHALAMIUM OF HELEN. Twelve noble virgins of Sparta, having their hair inwreathed with hyacinths, assemble before the bridal chamber of Menelaus and Helen, and chant the Hymeneal Song. They are merry with the bridegroom, and full of the praises of Helen. Some pretend that this beautiful poem is an imitation of Stesichorus: others suppose that Theocritus, while living at the court of Ptolemy Philadelphus, had an opportunity of reading the Septuagint, and transferred some of the fine images of this Idyl from the Song of Solomon.

1. Ἐν ποκ' ἄρα. Once according to custom at Sparta, i. e. as was usual on such occasions. This is the true meaning of ἄρα in the present passage. It may be expressed in Latin by "rite," or "de more." Comp. xxiv. 42. and see Buttmann's Gr. Gr. § 149. Harles says it stands for μὲν οὖν, or μὲν δὴ, and is correlative to δὲ in vs. 7. refer-

In like manner the Latins say "apud Menelaum," at the house, or palace of Menelaus. — 2. Θάλλοντα κόμαις. Comp. Horace, Od. i. 4. 9. Milton, P. L. iv. 301. — 3. Νεογράφτῳ. I. e. newly hung with rich tapestry. It was usual for the bridegroom to have a new bridal chamber prepared before the day of the nuptials and superbly hung with tapestry. See Feith. Antiq. Homer, ii. 14. 2. Apoll. Rhod. i. 775. Homer, II. P. 36. and Potter, l. c. — 4. Δώδεκα. The epithalamium was sung by youths, or virgins, and frequently by both. — Μέγα χρῆμα. The great wonder of the Spartan virgins, on account of their beauty. See Viger, iii. § 13. l. seqq. — 5. Τὴν ἀγαπατὴν. The beloved daughter.

With entwined feet; the legs and feet of the dancers appearing so to the spectators. Comp. Homer, II. 3. 599. Kiessling, who understands the term as applying to the feet of the dancers singly, translates it, mit verschlungenen Füßen, "with implicated feet." Polwhele renders it "many twinkling feet," which expression he borrowed from Gray's Progress of Poetry, and Gray himself from Homer, Odys. 8. 265. Μαρμαρυγὰς ὄφειτο πόδων. He admired the twinkling of their feet. Casaubon for ποσσὶ would read χερσὶ, as in the Geneva MS. Horace, Od. i. 4. 6. Almost all the other MSS. and early edd. have Ἀὼς ἀντέλλοισα . . . πρόσ-ωπον, Π. νύξ ἄτε, λευκὸν ἔαρ, &c. See the notes of Kiessling and Dahl; and particularly an Excursus of twenty-three pages by the latter editor. With respect to νύξ put for the Moon, see Burmann on Virgil, Æn. x. 162. and the commentators on Propert. iv. 4. 23. where "luna" is put for "nox."

32. Οὔτε τις ἐν ταλάρῳ. No one winds such fine work in her basket, i. e. no virgin winds and puts into her basket thread so finely drawn. Τάλαρος means a work-basket, used by the females of antiquity, to contain their yarn when wound into balls. Comp. Homer, Odys. Δ. 131. Πηνίζειν sometimes signifies to weave. — 33. Οὔτ' ἐνὶ δαιδαλέῳ. And no virgin is wont to cut from the long beams a closer web, having woven it with a shuttle in the artificial loom. Comp. xv. 35. — Ἄτριον. Doric for ἡτριον, properly the woof laid out in the loom to receive (κρόκη) the warp. See Valckenaër on Euripides, Phœn. 1727. Hesychius: ἄτριον, ὄφος λεπτόν: a fine tissue, as in this passage. Comp. Euripides, Ion. 1421.

35. Κροτῆσαι. Virgil, Æn. vi. 647. "pectine pulsat eburno." — 36. Ἀρτεμιν αἰείδοισα. Comp. Ovid, Fast. iii. 817. seqq. Tibull. ii. 1. 65. — 37. Ἐπ' ὄμμασιν. The eye was sacred to Cupid. There, according to Philostratus, he was supposed to lie in ambush. There is a beautiful epigram of Meleager, Anthol. vii. 6. where Cupid is said to lie hid in Zenophila's eye. Bergler on Alciphron, iii. 1. cites the following from Aristænetus i. 10.: Καὶ τοῖς ὁμομασι χάριτες οὐ τρεῖς, καθ' Ἡσίοδον, ἀλλὰ δεκάδων περιχορεύει δεκάς. Comp. Musæus, Hero and Leander, vs. 65.— Ἱμεροί. Comp. Anacreon, li. 26. lxii. 2.

39. Ἐς δρόμον. To the course and the meadow flowers. Hendiadys for to the stadium on the banks of the Eurotas.— 40. Ἐρψοῦμες. Comp. i. 105. vii. 2.— 41. Πολλὰ τεοῦς. Comp. xi. 25.

43. Στέφανον λωτῷ. According to Athenæus, the Alexandrians were particularly fond of garlands composed of the lotus-flower, which greatly resembles our great water-lily. The monuments of the Ægyptians are frequently observed to be decorated with sculpture in imitation of the leaves of the lotus. Comp. Paschal de Coronis, iii. 13. and Harles on Ovid, Trist. iv. 1. 31. "Be flowering lotus twined, that loves the ground, And with its wreath the plane-tree branches crown'd; While dropping on the shaded turf below, From silver shells ambrosial unguents flow." Polyhele. For the dedication of trees, see Robinson, Ant. Gr. iii. 2.

47. Γράμματα δ' ἐν φλοιῷ. Virgil, Ecl. x. 52. "Certum est in sylvis, inter spelæa ferarum Malle pati, tenebrisque meos incidere amores Arboribus; crescent illæ, crescetis, amores." Comp. 50. Κουροτρόφος. This was also an epithet of Ceres. See Robinson, Ant. Gr. iii. 1. iv. 11. Jacobs compares Virgil, Æn. viii. 71. "Nymphæ, Laurentes nymphæ, genus amnibus unde est."— 51. Εὐτεκνίαν. According to Homer, Il. Γ. 175. Odys. Δ. 12. seqq. and Coluthus, Helen had only a daughter, Hermione, by Menelaus. In the margin of the Medicean MS. is the following: Μενελάου καὶ Ἑλένης ἀναγράφονται παῖδες Σωσιφάνης, Νικό-λων· Ζεὺς δὲ, Κρονίδας Ζεὺς, ἄφθιτον ὄλβον,

ΚΗΡΙΟΚΛΕΪΤΗΣ. THE THIEF OF THE HONEYCOMBS. This is an imitation of the fortieth Ode of Anacreon, which stands thus in Mehlhorn's edition :

Εἰς Ἔρωτα.

Κοιμωμένην μέλιτταν
Οὐκ εἶδεν, ἀλλ' ἐτρώθη

1. Μέλισσα. This, as Vossius observes, is to be taken collectively. Hence τραύματα, vs. 6. — 2. Ἄκρα δάκτυλα. “Extremos digitos,” his fingers' ends. So ἄκροισ τοῖς ποσὶν ἐπιψαύειν τοῦ ὕδατος in Lucian's seventh Marine Dialogue. Comp. Anacreon, viii. 4. The same idiom is common in Latin. The neuter plural δάκτυλα is not very unusual. ΒΟΥΚΟΛΙΨΚΟΣ. THE NEATHERD. This Idyl contains the indignant complaint of a neatherd, whose addresses had been repulsed with scorn by a city damsel. He calls on his friends, the shepherds, to bear witness to his beauty and accomplishments; and endeavours to show, by examples, that herdsmen have been found worthy to be loved even by Goddesses. The critics very unjustly deny this poem the title of Pastoral. Heinsius ascribes it to Moschus.

6. Οἷα βλέπεις. This is said in derision. Fawkes however gives it another turn: "How pleasing your look! and how gently you play! How soft is your voice! and what fine things you say!" Graefe reads the remainder of the verse thus: ὀκκοῖα γελαῖς, ὡς ἄρτια παλσδεῖς. — 7. Λαλέεις. Kiessling conjectured λαλαγεῖς. He considers this verse, however, as spurious, especially as it is omitted in one MS. — 8. Ὡς μαλακόν. This, as well as vs. 8., is said in irony. Virgil, Ecl. viii. 32. "Dum despicias omnes, Dumque tibi est odio mea fistula, dumque capellæ, Hirsutumque supercilium, promissaque barba." — Ἀδέα χαίταν. A few adjectives ending in us, such as εὐθὺς, ἡδὺς, εὐρὺς, have sometimes their accusative sing. in έα, in place of ὺν, and that even in ἩΡΑΚΛΕΪΣΚΟΣ. THE YOUNG HERCULES. The poet relates how Juno, urged by unrelenting anger, sent two huge serpents to the palace of Amphitryo, commissioned to destroy the infant Hercules; and how Hercules, then cradled in the shield of Pterelaus, and being only ten months old, strangled the monsters. Comp. Pindar's first Nemean Ode. Then follows the solemn prophecy of Tiresias concerning the hero's future life and glorious achievements: with an account of his masters and education. "This Idyl has been attributed to Moschus; but it certainly contains imagery and sentiment which have not a feature of his genius, and far indeed surpass his powers. There is surely no reason for refusing it a place among the Idyls of our poet. In some parts Theocritus rises above his usual tenor, and soars to the heights of epic poetry. Philostratus the younger has drawn a fine picture of this story, where the artist had, probably, a view to the poem before us." Polwhele.

He prefers, however, the idea of a supernatural illumination. "The young Hercules cradled in Amphitryo's shield, is a finely imagined painting. We are at once struck with the propriety and novelty of the association. The description of the serpents, not even Pindar has exceeded: but there is something so extremely awful in the supernatural illumination of the chamber, at the hour of midnight, that we are ready to believe light, under certain circumstances, to be equally the source of the sublime with darkness." Polwhele.

 Δμῶες ἐμοί, στιβαροὺς δὲ θυρᾶν ἀνακόψατ' ὀχῆας.
 Ἀνστατε, δμῶες ταλασίφρονες. αὐτὸς αὔτεϊ. 50

In the next verse ἄνστα is also for ἀνάστηθι. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 210. 5.—36. Μηδὲ πόδεςσι. Comp. Huschke and Wunderlich on Tibullus, i. 3. 91. — 37. Παίδων ὁ νεώτερος. Comp. vs. 2. — 38. Ἡ οὐ νοέεις. The particles ἡ οὐ form but one syllable here. Comp. Euripides, Orest. 592. and Spitzner de Versu Gr. H. p. 181. — Ὅτι νυκτὸς ἄωρί. Comp. xi. 40. Warton thinks this is imitated from Homer, Odys. T. 37. where Telemachus and Ulysses are surveying by night the armory of the royal palace. Comp. Sophocles, Trach. 880. — 40. Ἔστι τί μοι. Believe me, there is something strange in the house. — φίλ' ἀνδρῶν. Comp. xv. 75. and Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 189.

44. Ἦτοι ὄγε. Comp. vs. 23. — 46. Ἀμφιλαφῆς δ' ἄρα. And then again, &c.

47. Δὴ τότε. Then immediately. See Hoogeveen. Kiessling renders them “igitur.” — Ὑπνον βαρὺν ἐκφυσῶντας. Thus Virgil, speaking of Rhamnes, Æn. ix. 328. “Toto proflabat pectore somnum.”

49. Ἀνακόψατε. Strike back, draw back. — 50. Ἀνστατε. Comp. vs. 35. After this verse is read in some MSS. Ἡ ῥα γυνὴ φοίνισσα μύλαις ἐπὶ κοῖτον ἔχοισιν, which Valckenaër thinks should stand between vss. 49. and 50. thus: Ἡ ῥα γυνὴ φοίνισσα μύλαις ἐπὶ κοῖτον ἔχοισα, Ἀνστατε, &c. According to Gaisford, the same verse is found in the Medicean MS. with the reading ἔχουσα.

Οἱ δ' αἶψα προγένοντο λύχνοις ἅμα δαιομένοισι

51. Οἱ δ' αἶψα. Comp. Homer, Il. Σ. 525.

53. Ἦτοι ἄρ' ὥς. Then, therefore, when they saw, &c. Comp. vs. 23. 44. — Εἶδοντο. For εἶδον, as in Homer, Il. Δ. 374. Comp. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 231. 1. — 54. Ἀπρίξ. Comp. xv. 68. — 56. Δεικανάασκεν. So ναιετάασκον in Homer, Il. B. 539. For this form see Matth. Gr. Gr. § 199. and comp. Apollonius Rhod. ii. 142. 997. — Ἐπάλλετο. He leaped high for joy. In this case it is Ionic and Doric for ἐφήλετο, imperfect of ἐφάλλομαι. Some translate it, he was agitated with joy, making it the imperfect of πάλλομαι. See the Lexicon Doricum of Portus. — 57. Γελάσας δὲ πάρος. Warton, after admiring the sublimity of the poet, adds: "We have been terrified at the marvellous achievements of the infant Hercules. But here our sensations become mixed. While he throws the serpents at his father's feet, we have still a shade of terror on our minds; but his engaging manner, so natural to his age, recalls our preconceptions of the child, and tempers our fear with the feelings of affection."

59. Ποτὶ σφέτερον. The other she took to her breast, the fretful Iphiclus, withered through terror, i. e. pale, the blood having left his cheeks. Homer, Il. K. 376. has χλωρὸς ὑπαὶ δείους, which means the same thing. See Kuster on Aristophanes, Thesm. 853. Thus Virgil, Æn. vii. 518. "Et trepidæ matres pressere ad pectora natos." — 61. Τὸν ἄλλον. Comp. vii. 36.

63. Ὅρνιχες τρίτον ἄρτι. The cocks now for the third time chanted (i. e. proclaimed) the last of twilight. — 65. Χρέος νεοχμὸν. The strange affair.

67. Μηδ', εἴτι θεοί. Comp. Homer,

Αἰδόμενος ἐμὲ κρύπτει· καὶ ὥς οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλύξαι
 Ἀνθρώποις ὃ τι Μοῖρα κατὰ κλωστῆρος ἐπείγει, Μάντι Εὐηρεῖδα, μάλα σε φρονέοντα διδάσκω. 70

Τὼς ἔλεγεν βασίλεια· ὃ δ' ἀνταμείβετο τοίως·
 Θάρσει, ἀριστοτόκεια γύναι, Περσῆϊον αἶμα.
 Ναὶ γὰρ ἐμὸν γλυκὺ φέγγος ἀποιχόμενον πάλαι ὄσσω,
 Πολλαὶ Ἀχαιϊάδων μαλακὸν περὶ γούνατι νῆμα
 Χεὶρὶ καταστρέψοντι, ἀκρέσπερον αἰεῖδοίσαι 75
 Ἀλκμήναν ὀνομαστί· σέβας δ' ἔσῃ Ἀργεῖαισι.

Il. A. 85. — 68. Καὶ ὥς οὐκ. Constr. Καὶ διδάσκω σε, μάντι Εὐηρεῖδα, μάλα φρονέοντα, ὥς οὐκ ἔστιν, &c. And I teach thee, o prophet, son of Everes, though thou art very wise, that it is not permitted men to avoid whatever Fate hastens on her spindle. Orph. Argon. 107. Ἄλλ' οὐκ ἔσθ' ὑπαλύξαι, ἃ δὴ πεπρωμένα κεῖται. Meineke reads καὶ ὥς οὐκ, not even thus indeed, i. e. εἰ καὶ τις κρύπτοι. — 69. Κλωστῆρος. Virgil, Georg. iv. 349. "devolvunt pensa fusis." Comp. Aristophanes, Ran. 1345. Apollonius Rhod. iii. 255. — 70. Μάντι Εὐηρεῖδα. The final of μάντι is to be elided. Comp. xv. 149. Th. Briggs would read, ὦ Εὐηρεῖδα; Meineke, Εὐηρηῖδα. See Hermann, Elem. D. M. p. 55. and Damm, Lex. Homer. v. Τειρεσίας.

72. Θάρσει. After this verse the following words are inserted in the Vatican MS. Θάρσει· μελλόντων δὲ τὸ λῶτον ἐν φρεσί. Valckenaër completes the Hexameter by adding βάλλε. Dahl and Kiessling consider this, as well as the line cited under vs. 50., a spurious interpolation.

73. Ναὶ γὰρ ἐμὸν. Polyphemus also swears by his eye, Idyl xi. 53. The blindness of Tiresias was inflicted as a punishment. Comp. Callimachus, H. Lav. Pal. 91. Propert. iv. 9. 57. Ovid, Met. iii. 323. — 75. Ἀεῖδοισαι. Monsieur Guys, Voyage Littéraire de la Grèce, speaking of the modern Greek women, observes: "They love fables and romances: the matrons are fond of relating, and the young women plume themselves on their adroitness in repeating, those they have learned, or can compose from such incidents as happen within their knowledge. Those stories are told, and ditties chanted, during the occupation of spinning or embroidery. The latter, indeed, is the chief employment of the Greek women. Those who follow it for a maintenance are employed in it from morning till night." "The prophecy of old Tiresias," says Polwhele in a note on this passage, "has been fulfilled in its most literal application." In the same note he remarks: "Of all the heathen writers of antiquity, who have assumed the style and manner of the prophet, the poet Seneca is the most happy in his oracles. The following prediction is clear and beautiful: it is free from all oracular ambiguity:

' Venient annis sæcula seris,
 Quibus Oceanus vincula rerum
 Laxet, et ingens pateat tellus, Tethysque novos detegat orbes;
 Nec sit terris ultima Thule.'
Medea, ii. 375.

No one will hesitate in the application of these lines to the discovery of America. Yet they were written nearly fifteen hundred years before that event took place."

Τοῖος ἀνὴρ ὃς μέλλει ἐς οὐρανὸν ἄστρο φέροντα

77. Τοῖος. "Talis," "tantus." Hesychius interprets it οὕτως ἀγαθός. See Ernesti on Callimachus, H. Del. vs. 27. and comp. Xenophon, Mem. ii. 1.—Ἐς οὐρανόν. Virgil, Ecl. v. 56. "Candidus insuetum miratur limen Olympi, Sub pedibusque videt nubes et sidera Daphnis."—78. Ἀπὸ στέρνων. A hero broad in his breast, a broad-breasted hero. Comp. Homer, Il. B. 479.—79. Οὗ καί. By whom shall he worsted, &c. "Shall many men and many monsters slay." Faukes.

80. Δώδεκά οἱ τελέσαντι. Constr. Πεπρωμένον ἐστὶ οἱ τελέσαντι δώδεκα μόχθους, οἰκεῖν ἐν οἴκῳ Διός. Theocritus supplies this ellipsis elsewhere. Comp. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 380. obs. 5. Seneca, Herc. 84. Ὅπανίκα. Virgil, Ecl. v. 60. "Nec lupus insidias pecori," &c. Ecl. iv. 22. "Nec magnos metuent armenta leones." Comp. Hesiod, Ἔργ.

90. seqq. Warton thinks both poets must have borrowed from Isaiah, xi. 6. "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid." Comp. lxv. 25.—85. Καρχαρόδων. Sharp-toothed. Homer and Hesiod use the form καρχαρόδους. Comp. Il. K. 360. N. 199. Theogn. vs. 180.

86. Εὖτυκον. Ready prepared. This rare form of εὖτυκτος occurs also in Æschylus, Suppl. 952.—87. Κάγκανα. Dried. Comp. Homer, Il. Φ. 364.—Ἀσπαλάθω. The Rose of Jerusalem. Comp. iv. 57.—Παλιούρω. A sort of thorn-tree, the "Rhamnus Paliurus" of Linnæus. It may be the plant which is cultivated in gardens under the name of Christ's thorn. Of this is supposed to have been made our Saviour's crown, when he was led to crucifixion. Comp. Theophrast. H. Pl. iv. 3. Diosc. i. 121. Spreng. i. 83. 162.—88. Βάτω. Ἀχερδος, ἣ ἀγρία ἄπιος ἄχερός τις οὖσα, ἣ δυσχερὴς ταῖς χερσὶ λαβέσθαι καὶ πλεονασμοῦ τοῦ δ, ἄχερδος, ὡς δέλω, δεῖδω. It occurs in Homer, Odyss. Æ. 10. where it is generally explained as a thorn; black-thorn: so in Sophocles Œd. Col. 1596. where some translate it a wild pear-tree. Comp. Spreng. i. 25. and Sotion on Cassianus Bassus, Geopon. viii. 37.

Καῖε δὲ τῶδ' ἀγρίαισιν ἐπὶ σχίζαισι δράκοντες

91. Ἦρι. Comp. xviii. 39.—92. Εὖ μάλα. Very carefully. See Schæfer on Bos, Ellips. p. 223. The most powerful of all incantations was, they supposed, to throw the ashes of the sacrifice backward into the water. Thus Virgil, Ecl. viii. 101. "Fer cineres, Amarylli, foras; rivoque fluenti Transque caput jace: ne respexeris."—93. Ὑπερούριον. Reiske interprets this "ultra terminos ditionis tuæ;" Valckenaër, "ad flabra venti secundi;" Kiessling "in ventum secundum." The last named editor thinks vss. 92, 93. may be thus constructed: Ῥιψάτω ὑπὲρ ποταμοῦ, φέρουσα ἐς Ῥωγάδας πέτρας, i. e. over the river that they might be carried away by the wind. In place of ὑπερούριον, however, he ingeniously conjectured ὑπὲρ ὤμων, which corresponds with the "trans caput" of Virgil.—94. Ἀστρεπτος. The injunction not to look back, was usual in such cases. See the commentators on Virgil, l. c. and Georg. iv. 487.—Καθαρῶ θεείῳ. Tibullus, i. 5. 11. "Ipse ter circum lustravi sulfure puro." (On which see Bronkhuis. Comp. Silius Ital. iii. 181.—Πυρίωσατε. Thus Virgil, Æn. i. 704. "flammis adolere Penates."

96. Ἐστεμμένον. Put thick upon it. "Ἐστεμμένον ὕδωρ θαλλῶ, says Hermann, exquisite dictum puto de aqua ubique adhærente foliis rami: nam στέφειν proprie est nostrum stopfen, ("to constipate," "fill;") inde fere est ac "congerere," ut Æsch. Sept. c. Th. 50." Comp. Homer, A. 471. Θ. 232.—97. Ἐπιρρέξαι. Supply λερά. The verbs δρᾶν and ποιεῖν are used in the same manner. So also "facere" in Latin, as in Virgil, Ecl. iii. 77. Homer supplies the ellipsis, A. 147.

99. Ἐρωήσας. Having withdrawn his ivory car. Ἐρωεῖν is used actively also in Idyl xiii. 74. and in Homer, Il. N. 57.

101. Νέον φυτὸν ὥς. A simple and beautiful comparison, much used by the ancient poets. Theocritus seems Ἐτρέφετ', Ἀργεῖω κεκλημένος Ἀμφιτρύωνος.

 Γράμματα μὲν τὸν παῖδα γέρων Λίνος ἐξεδίδαξεν, Υἱὸς Ἀπόλλωνος, μελεδωνεὺς ἄγρυπνος ἥρας· to have borrowed it from Homer, Il. Σ. 56. where Thetis says of her son Achilles: 'Ο δ' ἀνέδραμεν ἔρνεϊ Ἴσος, Τὸν μὲν ἐγὼ θρέψασα, φυτὸν ὡς γουνῶ ἀλωῆς. "Like some fair plant, beneath my careful hand, He grew, he flourished, and he graced the land." Pope. Comp. Idyl xviii. 29. Homer, Odyss. Ζ. 175. Euripides, Hec. 20. — Ἀλωῶ. Καὶ τοξότης ἐπίσκοπος, ὅστις οἷδε καίρια βάλλειν τοξεύματα. Heinsius conjectured ἐπὶ σκοπὸν εἶναι διστόν. — 106. Εὐρυτος. Comp. Homer, Odyss. Θ. 224. seqq. xxi. 32. and Eustathius on Il. B. 730.

107. Χεῖρας ἔπλασσε. "And shaped his hands the box-tree lyre along."

Polyhele. — 108. Φιλαμμονίδας. Eumolpus is here said to be the son of Philammon, who was the son of Phæbus and Chione. Comp. Ovid, Met. xi. 317. According to others, the Eumolpus who instructed Hercules, was the son of Musæus, and disciple of Orpheus. See Gierig on Ovid, Met. xi. 93.

109. Ὅσσα δ' ἀπό. Constr. Ἐμαθε πάντα ὅσα ἄνδρες Ἀργόθεν ἐδροστρόφοι, &c. He learned all the devices by which, &c. They are called ἐδροστρόφοι, because in moving their legs to trip up their adversary, they also turned their haunches. Theophrastus, Char. 27. Τοῖον ἐπισκύνιον βλοσυρῷ ἐπέκειτο προσώπῳ.
 Ἴππους δ' ἐξελάσασθαι ὑφ' ἄρματι, καὶ περὶ νύσσαν
 Ἀσφαλέως κάμπτοντα, τροχῷ σύριγγα φυλάξαι

 Αὐτὸς, ἐπεὶ μάλα πολλὰ θοῶν ἐξήρατ' ἀγώνων 120
 Ἄργει ἐν ἱπποδότῳ κειμήλια· καὶ οἱ ἀαγεῖς Δίφροι, ἐφ' ὧν ἐπέβαινε, χρόνῳ διέλυσαν ἱμάντας.

of Dares, Æn. v. 378. "Nec quisquam ex agmine tanto Audet adire virum, manibusque inducere cestus."

118. Τροχῷ σύριγγα. To protect the socket of the wheel, i. e. to prevent that part of the wheel in which the axle-tree turns, from striking against the goal. "At the sharp turn with rapid wheels to roll, Nor break the grazing axle on the goal." Fawkes. Nestor in Homer, Il. Ψ. 338. seqq. very particularly cautions his son against an accident of this kind. Comp. Horace, Od. i. 1. 5. In ancient times the goal was a large trunk of an oak, or pine-tree, erected at the extremity of the course, about a cubit in height, and supported on each side by two white polished stones. See Homer, l. c. and Menard, Mœurs des Grecs.

121. Καὶ οἱ ἀαγεῖς. The meaning of the passage is this: His chariots, which were so old, that the reins were worn by time, had never been broken in the race; so skilful was he in the art of driving.

125. Λόχον τ' ἀναμετρήσασθαι. In making an attack, to estimate the force of a hostile ambush, i. e. to calculate what force an enemy might be able to place in ambush. Toup joins ἐπιόντα with λόχον. — 127. Ἐδαεν. See Matth. Gr. Gr. 229. — Φυγὰς Ἄργεος ἐνθῶν. "There is great inconsistency in this passage, which nobody, that I know of, has observed, or tried to remedy. We have no account in history that Castor was a fugitive; but that Tydeus was we have indisputable authority. Comp. Homer, Il. Ε. 119. Might I venture to offer an emendation, I would read φυγὰς Ἄργεος ἐνθῶν, and then the construction might be: Castor taught him these accomplishments at the time that Tydeus reigned over the kingdom of Argos, whither he had fled an exile, having received the sovereignty from Adrastus. Thus the passage becomes correspondent with Homer, with good sense, and history; for Tydeus fled from Calydonia to Argos for manslaughter, where he married Deipyle the daughter of Adrastus, and afterwards succeeded him in the kingdom,"

133. Εὐνὰ δ' ἥς. Comp. ii. 90. — 134. Δέρμα λεόντειον. Virgil, Æn. vii. 87. "Pellibus incubuit stratis, somnorumque petivit." For the very ancient custom of sleeping on skins, see Cerda on this passage of Virgil. Hence the Latin verb "dormire" is derived: ἀπὸ τοῦ δέρματος. See Vossius, Etym. v. "Hegemistris."

135. Ἄρτος Δωρικὸς. Coarse bread like those cakes which the Athenians called πέλανοι. Schol. on Apollonius Rhod. i. 1077. Φησὶ δὲ τοὺς ἀκαθάρ-τουν καὶ εὐτελεῖς ἄρτους, οὗς ὁ Θεόκρι-τος Δωρικούς φησιν. — 136. Ἀσφαλέως.

Certainly sufficient to satisfy, &c. The dinner of Hercules became proverbial. Comp. Aristophanes, Vesp. 60. Ran. 62. Av. 1689. Pac. 741. and Apol-lodorus, ii. 4. 4. Alciphron, iii. 38. makes mention of a certain Phrygian, who could eat as much as four la-bourers.

137. Ἐπ' ἅματι. At the close of the day. See Gronovius on Lucian, tom. i. p. 358. Ἐπ' ἡματι in Homer, Il. K. 28. is explained by the Scholiast ἐν μᾶ ἡμέρᾳ. Comp. Il. T. 229. Hesiod, Ἔργ. 43. Τυννὸς is a Doric word synonymous with μικρός. — 138. Οὐκ ἀσκητὰ. Not ornamented. Ἀσκητὸς is an epithet usually applied to rich and splendid garments. Comp. Ho-mer, Il. E. 179. The garments of Hercules were unadorned and reached midway between the knee and the ankle. — Ἐννυτο. See Matth. Gr. Gr. § 233.
